MEMOIRS
JOHN DRYDEN.

Here let me bend, great Dryden, at thy shrine,
Thou dearest name to all the tuneful Nine!
With strong invention, noblest vigour fraught,
Thought still springs up, and rises out of thought
Numbers ennobling numbers in their course,
In varied sweetness flow, in varied force;
The powers of genius and of judgment join,
And the whole art of poetry is thine.

To judge rightly of an author, we must transport ourselves to his time, and examine what were the wants of his contemporaries, and what were the means of supplying them*. The life of Dryden comprehends a history of the literature of England, and its changes, during nearly half a century. Our author may be considered as the father of English criticism, as the writer who first taught us to determine upon principles the merit of composition. As he wrote from necessity, he was obliged to pay a certain deference to the public opinion ; “ for he whose bread depends upon the success of his volume, (says Sir Walter Scott,) is compelled to study popularity.” Educated in a pedantic taste, Dryden was destined, if not to give laws to the stage of England, at least to defend its liberties ; to improve burlesque into satire ; to free translation from the fetters of verbal metaphor, and to exclude it from the license of paraphrase ; to teach posterity the powerful and varied poetical harmony of which their language was capable ; to give an example of the lyric Ode of unapproached excellence ; and to leave to English literature a name second only to those of Milton and of Shakspeare*.

From the time of the Restoration till his death, the poet produced yearly some new performance, allowed to be most excellent in the particular style which was fashionable for the time ; therefore, if we would know the gradual changes which took place in English poetry, we must consult the writings of our author.

John Dryden was born at the parsonage-house of Oldwinkle, near Oundle, in Northamptonshire, on or about the 9th of August, 1631. His father was the third son of Sir Erasmus Driden, bart. of Canons Ashby, in the same county. Our poet appears to have received his education at Westminster, under the celebrated Dr. Busby, with whom he made rapid progress in classical learning. As a task he translated the third satire of Persius, and wrote many pieces as exercises. In 1650, Dryden was admitted in Trinity College, Cambridge, where his conduct was uniformly regular, and in 1653, he took the degree of Bachelor of Arts. His studies, however, were interrupted by the death of his father, in 1654; and he left the university to take possession of an estate in Northamptonshire, worth about 60*l.* per annum; but he subsequently returned, and remained in the college until 1657. After leaving the university, the poet was patronized by Sir Gilbert Pickering *, who was a stanch reformer, and assisted Cromwell in his privy-council. Sir Gilbert, however, was not the only relative of Dryden in the court of Cromwell, as the elder brother of the poet's father held a lucrative situation under the Protector.

The first theme worthy notice of Dryden's muse, was the death of Cromwell; and the topics of praise are, generally speaking, such as Cromwell's worst enemies could not have denied him; but as the poet spared the exiled monarch in his panegyric on the Protector, so, after the Restoration, in his numerous writings on the side of royalty, there is no instance of his recalling his former praise of Cromwell. With the return of the king, the fall of Dryden's patrons was necessarily involved; therefore, as the poet was then left to his own exertions, he testified his acquiescence in the Restoration, first by publishing Astrea Redux †, and next, by some verses entitled A Panegyric to his Sacred Majesty, and for these poems he was rewarded by a handsome gratuity ‡.

* Sir G. Pickering was cousin-german to the poet.

‡ These gratuities were according to the fashion of the times. Thus we find the corporation of Hull backing a polite address

The poet having no settled means of support, (with the exception of his small estate,) he took lodgings of a bookseller; and though we are informed that he wrote prefaces and occasional pieces for his landlord, few traces are to be found of the means by which he secured his place in society; the poet, however, was much attached to experimental philosophy; and, as one proof of the respect in which he was held by learned men, he was chosen a member of the Royal Society. Dryden now became fully sensible that it was necessary he should apply his talents in some line, in which he might derive a more steady and certain recompense, than by being a literary labourer to a bookseller. Accordingly, his next poem was of greater length and importance; this was Annus Mirabilis, (the Year of Wonders). In this piece he excelled his contemporaries in powers of composition; the lines and the versification were highly polished, and the expression was carefully corrected. “The Annus Mirabilis (says Johnson) may be esteemed as one of Dryden’s elaborate pieces.”

Compelled, undoubtedly, by necessity, (for he does not appear to have ever been much pleased with his dramas,) he commenced writing for the stage; “and when he once invaded the stage (says Johnson) he kept possession of it for many years, not indeed without the competition of rivals, who sometimes prevailed, or the censure of critics, which was often poignant and just; but with such a degree of reputation, as made him secure of being heard, whatever might be the final determination of the public. I wish (continues the Doctor) that there were no necessity of following the progress of his theatrical fame, or of tracing the meanders of his mind through the series of his dramatic performances; it will be fit, however, to enumerate them, and to take especial notice of those which are distinguished by any peculiarity; for the composition and fate of twenty-eight dramas include too much of a poetical life to be omitted.”

His first piece was the comedy of The Wild Gallant, which was acted in 1662-3 without success; but the beautiful Duchess of Cleveland extended her protection to the unfortunate performance, and caused it to be played more than once before Charles II.*

The Rival Ladies, a play in rhyme, was our author's next dramatic essay; it was acted in 1663, and published in the year following, with a dedication to the Earl of Orrery. This tragi-comedy was well received, and probably of some advantage to the author. In 1663-4, he assisted Sir Robert Howard in the composition of a rhyming play, called The Indian Queen, which was acted with great applause †.—In 1665, The Indian Emperor was produced, which drew upon the author the attention of the public in an eminent degree. It is a tragedy in rhyme, and was dedicated to the Duchess of Monmouth, who had it in her power

* This piece furnished matter for a lively scene in The Rehearsal, of which mention will presently be made.

† Our author's friendship with Sir R. Howard, introduced him to the family of the Earl of Berkshire, and the poet soon gained the affections of the earl's eldest daughter; the match, however, was not altogether agreeable to the lady's family, nor was mutual happiness found by the parties who had formed the engagement.

to serve Dryden with some effect.—In the same year, he published his celebrated Essay on Dramatic Poetry; an elegant and an instructive composition, which he carefully revised in 1684, and then dedicated it to Lord Buckhurst. Dryden's fame as an author was doubtless exalted by his Essay on Dramatic Poesy, which showed that he could not only write plays, but defend them when written: and it was probably after the Essay appeared, that our author entered into a contract with the King's Company of players, to produce three plays in the course of the year*.—In 1667, The Maiden Queen, a tragicomedy, was represented; and the credit of the piece was redeemed by the comic part, which is a light and an airy representation of the fashionable and licentious manners of the times in which the piece was written. This drama was followed by The Tempest, an alteration of the play by Shakspeare, in which Dryden assisted Sir William Davenant; and The Tempest seems to have succeeded to the utmost wish of the authors†.—Sir Martin Mar-all was our author's next production, which was attended with complete success, as it was played four times at court, and above thirty times at the theatre‡. The Evening's Love, or the Mock Astrologer, was also produced in 1668;

* In consideration of this engagement, Dryden was admitted to hold a share in the profits of the theatre; but the poet never produced more than half the quantity contracted for. Dr. Johnson says, the agreement was for four plays in each year.

† As a counterpart of Shakspeare's plot, the authors introduced a man who had never seen a woman, and also furnished Caliban with a monster sister.

and in the preface to this piece, he justified himself from the charge of plagiarism.—The poet was now so much distinguished, that in 1668, he succeeded Sir W. Davenant, as poet-laureat*.—Tyrannic Love, or the Royal Martyr, was acted in 1669, a heroic tragedy, and had a large share of applause. He next produced (in 1670-1) those two singular plays, The Conquest of Granada, “written (says Johnson) with a determination to glut the public with dramatic wonders;” but both these plays were received with enthusiastic applause.

Dryden, however, was now to experience the inconveniences of elevation, and to sustain an attack upon the style of writing which he had practised. The witty farce of The Rehearsal was produced by the joint efforts of the Duke of Buckingham, Butler, the author of Hudibras, Sprat, afterwards Bishop of Rochester, and Martin Clifford, afterwards Master of the Charter-house; and that the public might be at no loss to assign the character of Bayes to the laureat, all Dryden’s best plays were parodied, his peculiarities of language were strictly copied, and the actor wore a dress exactly resembling the poet’s usual habit†. The play met with a stormy reception, on the first night of representation; but finally the audience was drawn in its favour, and then the success of The Rehearsal was unbounded. The ridicule cast upon heroic plays, however, did not prevent their being still exhibited; but Dryden did not trust to his powers of numbers in his Marriage A-la-Mode, a tragi-comedy, a piece eminently successful, which he dedicated to the Earl of Rochester, and the compliment was handsomely acknowledged. The Assignment was also brought forward in 1672, and driven off the stage, “against the opinion (says the writer) of many of the best judges.”—Amboyna, a tragedy, a temporary performance in the time of the Dutch war, (1673,) was suddenly dismissed.—Our poet’s pen was next engaged (1674) on a dramatic poem, called the *State of Innocence; “a tragedy (says Johnson) in rhyme, but of which the personages are such as cannot decently be exhibited on the stage.”—Dryden’s next tragedy Aureng-Zebe appeared in 1675, and was acted with general applause.—In 1677, he produced All for Love†; in which “he has recommended, as laudable and worthy of imitation, that conduct that through all ages, the good have censured as vicious, and the bad despised as foolish‡;” but the play was nevertheless received with universal approbation. In 1678, the comedy of Limberham was acted, which, after the third night, was prohibited, as too indecent for the stage. In conjunction with Lee, the tragedy of Cædipus was produced in 1678-9, with some favour. Dryden altered Shakspeare’s Troilus and Cressida, which the author left in a state of strange imperfection, resembling more a chronicle than a dramatic piece. The altered play was first acted in 1679, and the last scene of the third act is considered to be a master-piece. Dryden prefixed to this drama his excellent remarks on The Grounds of Criticism in Tragedy.—Our author's most successful tragi-comedy The Spanish Friar, was acted in 1681, and is eminent for the happy coincidence and coalition of two plots. It is an interesting play, and was deservedly a favourite with the public.

* The office of royal historiographer became vacant in 1666, and the situation of poet-laureat in 1668. These two offices, with a salary of 200*l.*, and an annual butt of Canary, were conferred upon Dryden, “for his learning, and eminent abilities, and his great skill and elegant style, both in verse and prose.” James II. subsequently added 100*l.* per year to the poet’s pension.

† About the same period, there were several pamphlets and fugitive pieces published against Dryden. He was also severely beaten by hired ruffians as he was passing through a street in Covent-garden.

* This was no other than that of new modelling the Paradise Lost of Milton.

In 1681, our author became conspicuous by uniting politics with poetry in the memorable satire (in two parts) of Absalom and Achitophel *, in which personal satire was applied in support of public principles. The poem is written in the style of a scriptural allusion, and its sale was rapid beyond example†. In the same year Dryden published The Medal, of which the subject is a medal struck on Lord Shaftesbury's escape from a prosecution; but in the satire, his lordship's licentious course of life is exposed to contempt and reprobation. The Medal was answered by the same weak authors who replied to the previous satire. But the reiterated attacks of Shadwell merited a severe castigation; and for that purpose, in 1682, our poet composed the satire of Mac Flecknoe, in which the vices and the follies of Shadwell are not concealed. This piece was followed by the poem of Religio Laici, which has a political tendency, though written to defend the church of England against the sectaries.

* From Achi, my brother, and tophel, a fool.

† The second part of this poem was published in 1692.

And here it may be sufficient to state that the models of satire afforded by Dryden, are superior to all that had ever preceeded them.

After a long and an expensive warfare, the two theatrical companies united their forces, and by the united company The Duke of Guise (the joint production of Dryden and Lee) was performed in 1683 : this tragedy was succeeded in 1685 by the musical drama of Aloion and Albanus ; but the news of the Duke of Monmouth's invasion, which was received while the piece was being performed for the sixth time, was the death-blow to this drama.

Dryden's political and polemic discussions, naturally interfered with his general poetical studies ; for between the accession of James and the Revolution, he only produced his first Ode to St. Cecilia, for the festival in 1687. But when he was removed from his situation of laureat, &c. (at the time of the accession of William and Marv.) the theatre again became his immediate resource ; and in 1690, he introduced his beautiful tragedy of Don Sebastian, with great theatrical pomp ; and the play maintained a high degree of public favour for many years, and deserved to maintain that favour for ever. In the same year, his comedy of Amphytryon was acted with great applause. In 1691, he produced the opera of King Arthur, which was eminently successful ; but its successor, (in 1692) the tragedy of Cleomenes was very coolly received. We will now close his dramatic career by mentioning that his last play, Love Triumphant was acted in 1694, with very bad success ; though the writer declares " that the characters in the drama are truly drawn, the fable not injudiciously contrived, and the catastrophe happily introduced."

It appears Dryden never made by a single play more than 100*l.*, even by the accumulated gain of the third night, the dedication, and the copy. His prologues, however, were so much esteemed, that when Southerne requested a prologue from our poet, the usual compliment of two guineas was offered; but the laureat demurred, and insisted upon three guineas; and added, "the players have had my goods too cheap!"

We must now consider Dryden as unconnected with the stage.

As the accession of James II. excited new hopes in all orders of men, and all hastened in "sugared addresses" to lament the sun which had set, and to hail the beams of that which had arisen; in his Threnodia Augustalis, Dryden at once paid a tribute to the memory of the deceased monarch, and decently solicited the attention of his successor. But "little was the Muses' hire, and light their gain;" and the "pension of a prince's praise" is stated to have been all their encouragement.

But perhaps the most remarkable incident in the poet's life, was his conversion to the Catholic faith, which took place soon after the accession of James; and in spite of all that has been urged by his enemies to the contrary, we have sufficient evidence in the present day to prove, that his conversion was effected by sincere conviction; although it is true "he was a servant of the court, and zealously attached to the person of James." We conceive his religious principles may be found in the poet's own lines, in The Hind and the Panther, where he says :—

“ My thoughtless youth was wing'd with vain desires ;
My manhood long misled by wandering fires ;
Follow'd false lights ; and when their glimpse was gone,
My pride struck out new sparkles of her own.”

Dryden never was a steady believer in the protestant doctrines ; but his disposition to believe in Christianity was obvious. His conversion was not of that sordid kind, which is the consequence of a strong temporal interest. He applied the arguments of Chillingworth to himself, “ that there must be somewhere an infallible judge, and the church of Rome is the only Christian society which either does or can pretend to that character.” But we are enabled to judge of Dryden's sincerity in his new faith, by the determined firmness with which he retained it. After the Revolution, his religion disqualified him from remaining as poet-laureat ; though had he followed the same course as many others, there is no question he would have been left in quiet possession ; “ but, (says Dryden,) I can never go an inch beyond my own conscience and my honour. If the court will consider me as a man who has done his best to improve the language, and especially the poetry of his country, and will be content with my acquiescence to the government, and forbearing satire on it, that I can promise ; but I can neither take the oaths, nor forsake my religion, because I know not what church to go to if I leave the Catholic.”

It may, nevertheless, easily be imagined, that our author was not long suffered to remain idle in the cause which he had adopted. He was enlisted to defend the conversion of the Duchess of York to the Catholic faith, and likewise the controversial papers found in a strong box of the late Charles II., against the attacks of Stillingfleet, Burnet, and others. When Stillingfleet returned to the charge, he was no way sparing of invective; Dryden, however, took his revenge on his adversaries generally, in his polemical poem of *'The Hind and the Panther'; and perhaps none of his productions contain finer lines than those in which he takes credit for the painful exertion of Christian forbearance, when called by injured feeling to resent personal accusation. He says:—

“ If joys hereafter must be purchased here
With loss of all that mortals hold so dear,
Then welcome infamy and public shame,
And last, a long farewell to worldly fame !”

The Hind and the Panther, of course, was assailed by the usual crowd of inferior satirists and pamphleteers, each of whom considered himself worthy of very distinguished and weighty recompense for his labour†; yet in the midst of this weak opposition, two or three editions of the poem were rapidly disposed of.

Our poet was employed by the court in translating Varilla's History of Heresies, a work held in considerable estimation by Catholic divines, a task for some reason which he ultimately abandoned. He next was engaged to translate the life of St. Francis Xavier, a work from which much curious information may be obtained relative to the state of India and Japan at the time of Xavier's mission, as well as of the internal regulations adopted by the society, of which the translator was a member.

Yet whatever pecuniary or other hopes Dryden might have formed, concerning his works favourable to the cause of James and the Catholic religion, they were suddenly and for ever blighted by the Revolution, though it does not appear that his critical empire was in the least interrupted. His supremacy was so well established at Will's coffee-house*, that a pinch out of Dryden's snuff-box was equal to taking a degree in that academy of wit.

In 1692, our author, with the assistance of his two sons, Congreve, Tate, and others, was enabled to publish a complete version of the Satires of Juvenal and of Persius. Dryden also made translations from Lucretius, Theocritus, the Odes of Horace, and other classical writers; and from the success of these miscellaneous pieces, the poet turned his thoughts to the translation of Virgil, the most laborious and difficult of all his works. In 1697, about three years after the work had been undertaken, the translation was presented to the public; "the most noble and spirited (said Pope) which I know in any language." So eager was the general expectation, that the first edition was disposed of in a few months, and a second published in the following year*. “This work (says Johnson) satisfied his friends, and for the most part silenced his enemies†.” Tonson, the bookseller, was anxious that Dryden should inscribe this work to king William; but the poet held fast to his integrity, and no prospect of personal advantage could induce him to take a step inconsistent with his religious and political sentiments. Upon Virgil and other translations, Garth observes: “As a translator, Dryden was just; as an inventor, he was rich; and his versions give him a fair pretence to that compliment which was made to a celebrated Frenchman, ‘It is uncertain who have the greatest obligation to him, the dead or the living.’”

While Dryden was engaged with his great translation, he found leisure to prepare a prose version of Fresnoy’s Art of Painting, in which he drew a parallel between painting and poetry; and Virgil was scarcely finished, before he again distinguished himself by the immortal Ode to Saint Cecilia. The task was undertaken at the earnest solicitation of the St. Cecilian Society; and even in the author’s time, that sublime production was received with all the applause which its unrivalled excellence demanded‡. “A nobler Ode never was produced, nor never will be produced!”

* There were two sets of subscribers to Virgil, viz. 101 at five guineas each, and 250 at two guineas each. It is presumed the poet derived about 1,300*l.* by this work.

† Swift must be reckoned among the exceptions. See Tale of a Tub.—The wit of Swift was also levelled against the poet for his triple-dedication of the Pastorals, Georgics, and Æneid, to three several patrons, Clifford, Chesterfield and Mulgrave.

‡ Dryden said in a letter to Tonson, “I am glad to hear

It is affecting to relate, that the state of the poet's circumstances rendered constant literary labour necessary for the support of his family, although the exertion and the confinement considerably impaired his health. But the last work which engaged our author's attention, was his Fables; and we find that early in 1699, he put into Tonson's hands "7,500 verses, more or less, being a delivery in part of 10,000 verses, which he agreed to furnish for two hundred and fifty guineas, to be made up three hundred pounds in the event of a second edition." The Fables of Dryden are the best examples of his talents as a narrative poet. The Knight's Tale possesses a degree of regularity which might satisfy the severest critic; indeed, in each of the Fables, the poet has displayed the superiority of his genius, by ornamenting those passages most susceptible of poetical description. The account of the fairy chivalry in the Flower and the Leaf, the powerful description of the battle, and of the champions who assisted at the tournaments, in the Knight's Tale, are splendid specimens of poetry. "The Knight's Tale is a story which exhausts in its conclusion all the interest that it has excited in its progress, and which, when terminated, leaves no question to be asked, no personage undisposed of, and no curiosity unsatisfied, is, abstractedly considered, more gratifying than the history of a few weeks of a ten years' war, commencing long after the siege had begun, and ending long before the city was taken *." The Fables were published early in 1700 ; and in the beautiful dedication the poet alluded to his long and honourable connexion with the Ormond family. He says, " I have been esteemed and patronized by the grandfather, the father. and the son, descended from one of the most conspicuous and most deserving families in Europe †."

The end of Dryden's labours was now fast approaching. The poet had long suffered both by the gout and the gravel, and more lately, erysipelas seized one of his legs ; and a slight inflammation in one of his toes became from neglect, a gangrene ‡. After a short interval Dryden died at his residence in Gerrard-street, on the 1st of May, 1700. He was sensible till nearly his last moments ; and he died in the Roman Catholic faith, with entire resignation to the Divine Will ; " taking of his friends so tender and obliging a farewell, as none but he himself could have expressed."

His family prepared to bury him with a decency becoming their limited circumstances, when several men of quality made a subscription for a public funeral. The body was embalmed, and laid in state in the Physicians' College. On the 13th of May, Dr. Garth pronounced a Latin oration over the remains of his departed friend, which were then preceded by a numerous procession of carriages, and deposited in Westminster Abbey, where a simple monument* distinguishes the place of the poet's interment. The story of the interruption of the funeral by Lord Jeffries, has been shown by Mr. Malone to be destitute of foundation; but the malice of Dryden's contemporaries, which he had experienced through life, attempted to turn into burlesque even his funeral honours†.

Dryden is represented as most amiable in disposition and moral in character. "Indeed (says Mr. Congreve) he had personal qualities to challenge both love and esteem from all who were truly acquainted with him. He was of a nature exceedingly humane and compassionate; easily forgiving injuries, and capable of a prompt and sincere reconciliation." His reading was extensive, his memory peculiarly retentive, communicative of his knowledge, ready and gentle in his correction of the errors of any writer who thought fit to consult him, and quite as ready and patient to admit of the reprehension of others, in respect of his own oversight or mistakes. "He was (continues Congreve) of all the men I ever knew, one of the most modest, and the most easily to be discountenanced in his approaches, either to his superiors or his equals." His conduct as a father, husband, and master of a family, was affectionate and faithful, and liberal and benevolent as far as his circumstances admitted. He was esteemed, admired, and courted by all the great men of the age in which he flourished. In the change of his opinions, both religious and political, Dryden must have acted from conviction; since, if personal interest had been his ruling motive, it certainly would have operated at the time of the Revolution.

For about forty years, however, Dryden's literary and personal character was the object of assault by every subaltern scribbler. The poet himself has said, "My morals have been sufficiently aspersed; that only sort of reputation which ought to be dear to every honest man, and is to me." Bishop Burnet said of Dryden "He was the greatest master of dramatic poesy, and a monster of immodesty and impurity." This clumsy censure called forth an animated reply from Lord Lansdown, who observed, "That all who knew the poet could testify that such was not his character. Dryden was so much a stranger to immodesty, that modesty in too great a degree was his failing: he hurt his fortune by it, complained of it, but never could overcome it. If, however, I may have leave to say it, Dryden's poems will last as long as the Bishop's sermons, supposing them to be equally excellent in their kind."

The license of our author's comedy, certainly had the apology of universal example; for it must be recollected he wrote in the hey-day of the merry monarch's reign. Dr. Johnson has likewise censured in severe terms the extreme flattery of Dryden's dedications; but the form of address to superiors must also be judged of by the manners of the times : perhaps the adulation contained in dedications was then as much a matter of course, as the submissive words which still precede the subscription of an ordinary letter ; yet the writer might plead the excuse, that “ having enemies, he made himself friends by panegyrics.” In after life, Dryden had the magnanimity to say : “ I plead guilty to all thoughts and expressions of mine, which can be truly argued of obscenity, profaneness, or immorality, and retract them. It becomes me not to draw my pen in the defence of a bad cause, when I have so often drawn it for a good one !”

To conclude :—The name of Dryden was first in English literature, nor was his fame confined to Britain. “ To him we owe the improvement, perhaps the completion, of our metre ; the refinement of our language, and much of the correctness of our sentiments. What was said of Rome adorned by Augustus, may be applied by an easy metaphor to English poetry embellished by Dryden—HE FOUND IT BRICK, AND HE LEFT IT MARBLE.”

TO HER GRACE

THE DUCHESS OF ORMOND:

WITH THE POEM OF

PALAMON AND ARCITE.

MADAM,

THE bard who first adorn'd our native tongue
Tuned to his British lyre this ancient song ;
Which Homer might without a blush rehearse,
And leaves a doubtful palm in Virgil's verse :
He match'd their beauties where they most excel,
Of love sung better, and of arms as well.

Vouchsafe, illustrious Ormond, to behold
What power the charms of beauty had of old ;
Nor wonder if such deeds of arms were done,
Inspired by two fair eyes that sparkled like your own.

If Chaucer by the best idea wrought,
And poets can divine each other's thought,
The fairest nymph before his eyes he set ;
And then the fairest was—Plantagenet !

Who three contending princes made her prize,
And ruled the rival nations with her eyes ;
Who left immortal trophies of her fame,
And to the noblest order gave the name.

Like her, of equal kindred to the throne,
You keep her conquests, and extend your own :
As when the stars, in their ethereal race,
At length have roll'd around the liquid space,
At certain periods they resume their place,
From the same point of heaven their course advance,
And move in measures of their former dance ;
Thus, after length of ages, she returns,
Restored in you, and the same place adorns ;
Or you perform her office in the sphere,
Born of her blood, and make a new platonic year.

O true Plantagenet ! O race divine !
(For beauty still is fatal to the line),
Had Chaucer lived that angel-face to view
Sure he had drawn his Emily from you :
Or had you lived, to judge the doubtful right,
Your noble Palamon had been the knight :
And conquering Theseus from his side had sent
Your generous lord, to guide the Theban government.

Time shall accomplish that ; and I shall see
A Palamon in him, in you an Emily.

Already have the Fates your path prepared,
And sure presage your future sway declared ;

When westward, like the sun, you took your way,
 And from benighted Britain bore the day,
 Blue Triton gave the signal from the shore,
 The ready Nereids heard, and swam before
 To smoothe the seas ; a soft Etesian gale
 But just inspired, and gently swell'd the sail ;
 Portunus took his turn, whose ample hand
 Heaved up his lighten'd keel, and sunk the sand,
 And steer'd the sacred vessel safe to land.
 The land, if not restrained, had met your way,
 Projected out a neck, and jutt'd to the sea.
 Hibernia, prostrate at your feet, adored,
 In you, the pledge of her expected lord ;
 Due to her isle ; a venerable name ;
 His father and his grandsire known to fame :
 Awed by that house, accusom'd to command,
 The sturdy kerns in due subjection stand ;
 Nor bear the reins in any foreign land.

At your approach, they crowded to the port ;
 And, scarcely landed, you create a court :
 As Ormond's harbinger, to you they run ;
 For Venus is the promise of the Sun.

The waste of civil wars, their towns destroy'd,
 Pales unhonour'd, Ceres unemploy'd,
 Were all forgot ; and oae triumphant day
 Wiped all the tears of three campaigns away :
 Blood, rapines, massacres were cheaply bought ;
 So mighty recompense your beauty brought.

As when the dove, returning, bore the mark
 Of earth restored to the long-labouring ark,

The relics of mankind, secure of rest,
Oped every window to receive the guest,
And the fair bearer of the message bless'd ;
So, when you came, with loud repeated cries,
The nation took an omen from your eyes,
And God advanced his rainbow in the skies.
To sign inviolable peace restored ;
The saints with solemn shouts proclaim'd the new accord.

When at your second coming you appear
(For I foretell that millenary year),
The sharpen'd share shall vex the soil no more,
But earth unbidden shall produce her store :
'The land shall laugh, the circling ocean smile,
And Heaven's indulgence bless the holy isle.

Heaven from all ages has reserved for you
That happy clime which venom never knew ;
Or if it had been there, your eyes alone
Have power to chase all poison but their own.

Now in this interval, which fate has cast
Betwixt your future glories and your past ;
This pause of power 'tis Ireland's hour to mourn ;
While England celebrates your safe return,
By which you seem the seasons to command,
And bring our summers back to their forsaken land.

The vanquish'd isle our leisure must attend,
Till the fair blessing we vouchsafe to send ;
Nor can we spare you long, though often we may lend.

The dove was twice employ'd abroad, before
The world was dried ; and she return'd no more.

Nor dare we trust so soft a messenger,
New from her sickness, to that northern air ;
Rest here a while your lustre to restore,
That they may see you, as you shone before ;
For yet, th' eclipse not wholly pass'd, you wade
Through some remains and dimness of a shade.

A subject in his prince may claim a right,
Nor suffer him with strength impair'd to fight ;
Till force returns, his ardour we restrain,
And curb his warlike wish to cross the main.
Now pass'd the danger, let the learn'd begin
Th' inquiry, where disease could enter in ;
How those malignant atoms forced their way ;
What in the faultless frame they found to make their prey ?

Where every element was weighed so well,
That Heaven alone, who mix'd the mass, could tell
Which of the four ingredients could rebel ;
And where, imprison'd in so sweet a cage,
A soul might well be pleased to pass an age.

And yet the fine materials made it weak ;
Porcelain, by being pure, is apt to break :
E'en to your breast the sickness durst aspire ;
And, forced from that fair temple to retire,
Profanely set the holy place on fire.
In vain your lord like young Vespasian mourn'd,
When the fierce flames the sanctuary burn'd :

And I prepared to pay in verses rude
A most detested act of gratitude :
E'en this had been your elegy, which now
Is offer'd for your health, the table of my vow.

Your angel sure our Morley's* mind inspired,
To find the remedy your ill required ;
As once the Macedon, by Jove's decree,
Was taught to dream a herb for Ptolemy :
Or Heaven, which had such overcost bestow'd
As scarce it could afford to flesh and blood,
So liked the frame, he would not work anew,
To save the charges of another you.
Or by his middle science did he steer,
And saw some great contingent good appear,
Well worth a miracle to keep you here :
And, for that end, preserved the precious mould,
Which all the future Ormonds was to hold ;
And meditated in his better mind
An heir from you, which may redeem the failing kind.

Bless'd be the power which has at once restored
The hopes of lost succession to your lord,
Joy to the first and last of each degree,
Virtue to courts, and, what I long'd to see,
To you the Graces, and the Muse to me.

O daughter of the Rose, whose cheeks unite
The differing titles of the red and white† ;

† Alluding to her descent from the Plantagenets, as daughter of Henry, Duke of Beaufort.

Who Heaven's alternate beauty well display,
The blush of morning, and the milky way ;
Whose face is paradise, but fenced from sin :
For God in either eye has placed a cherubin.

All is your lord's alone ; e'en absent, he Employs the care of chaste Penelope.
For him you waste in tears your widow'd hours,
For him your curious needle paints the flowers ;
Such works of old imperial dames were taught ;
Such, for Ascanius, fair Elisa wrought.

The soft recesses of your hours improve
The three fair pledges of your happy love :
All other parts of pious duty done,
You owe your Ormond nothing but a son ;
To fill in future times his father's place,
And wear the garter of his mother's race,

FABLES

BOCCACCIO AND CHAUCER.

PALAMON AND ARCITE ;

OR

THE KNIGHT'S TALE.

BOOK I.

IN days of old there lived of mighty fame,
A valiant prince ; and Theseus was his name :
A chief who more in feats of arms excell'd
The rising nor the setting sun beheld :
Of Athens he was lord ; much land he won,
And added foreign countries to his crown :
In Scythia with the warrior-queen he strove,
Whom first by force he conquer'd, then by love ;
He brought in triumph back the beauteous dame,
With whom her sister, fair Emilia, came.

With honour to this home let Theseus ride,
With Love to friend, and Fortune for his guide,
And his victorious army at his side.
I pass their warlike pomp, their proud array,
Their shouts, their songs, their welcome on the way :
But were it not too long, I would recite
The feats of Amazons, the fatal fight
Betwixt the hardy queen and hero knight ;
The town besieged, and how much blood it cost
The female army and th' Athenian host ;
The spousals of Hippolita, the queen ;
What tilts and tourneys at the feast were seen ;
The storm, at their return, the ladies' fear &c—
But these, and other things, I must forbear.
The field is spacious I design to sow,
With oxen, far unfit to draw the plough :
The remnant of my tale is of a length
To tire your patience, and to waste my strength ;
And trivial accidents shall be forborne,
That others may have time to take their turn ;
As was at first enjoin'd us by mine host :
That he, whose tale is best and pleases most,
Should win his supper at our common cost.

And therefore, where I left I will pursue
This ancient story, whether false or true,
In hope it may be mended with a new.
The prince I mention'd, full of high renown,
In this array drew near th' Athenian town ;
When in his pomp, and utmost of his pride,
Marching, he chanced to cast his eye aside,
And saw a choir of mourning dames, who lay
By two and two across the common way .

At his approach they raised a rueful cry,
And beat their breasts, and held their hands on high,
Creeping, and crying, till they seized at last
His courser's bridle, and his feet embraced.

'Tell me,' said Theseus, 'what and whence you are,
And why this funeral pageant you prepare?
Is this the welcome of my worthy deeds,
To meet my triumph in ill omen'd weeds?
Or envy you my praise, and would destroy
With grief my pleasures, and pollute my joy?
Or are you injured, and demand relief?
Name your request, and I will ease your grief.'

The most in years of all the mourning train
Began (but swooned first away for pain);
Then, scarce recover'd, spoke: 'Nor envy we Thy great renown, nor grudge thy victory;
'Tis thine, O king! the afflicted to redress,
And fame has fill'd the world with thy success:
We, wretched women, sue for that alone
Which of thy goodness is refused to none:
Let fall some drops of pity on our grief,
If what we beg be just, and we deserve relief;
For none of us, who now thy grace implore,
But held the rank of sovereign-queen before;
Till, thanks to giddy chance, which never bears
That mortal bliss should last for length of years,
She cast us headlong from our high estate,
And here in hope of thy return we wait;
And long have waited in the temple nigh,
Built to the gracious goddess Clemency.
But reverence thou the power whose name it bears,
Relieve th' oppress'd, and wipe the widow's tears;

I, wretched I, have other fortune seen,
The wife of Capaneus, and once a queen :
At Thebes he fell ; cursed be the fatal day !
And all the rest thou seest in this array,
To make their moan, their lords in battle lost
Before that town besieged by our confederate host ;
But Creon, old and impious, who commands
The Theban city, and usurps the lands,
Denies the rites of funeral fires to those Whose breathless bodies yet he calls his foes.
Unburn'd, unburied, on a heap they lie ;
Such is their fate, and such his tyranny ;
No friend has leave to bear away the dead,
But with their lifeless limbs his hounds are fed.'
At this she shriek'd aloud ; the mournful train
Echo'd her grief, and, grovelling on the plain,
With groans, and hands upheld, to move his mind,
Besought his pity to their helpless kind !

The prince was touch'd, his tears began to flow,
And, as his tender heart would break in two,
He sigh'd ; and could not but their fate deplore,
So wretched now, so fortunate before.
Then lightly from his lofty steed he flew,
And raising one by one the suppliant crew,
To comfort each, full solemnly he swore,
That by the faith which knights to knighthood bore,
And whate'er else to chivalry belongs,
He would not cease, till he revenged their wrongs,
That Greece should see perform'd what he declared ;
And cruel Creon find his just reward.
He said no more, but, shunning all delay,
Rode on ; nor enter'd Athens on his way :

But left his sister and his queen behind ;
And waved his royal banner in the wind ;
Where in an argent field the god of war
Was drawn triumphant on his iron car ;
Red was his sword, and shield, and whole attire,
And all the godhead seem'd to glow with fire ;
E'en the ground glitter'd where the standard flew,
And the green grass was dyed to sanguine hue.
High on his pointed lance his pennon bore
His Cretan fight, the conquer'd Minotaur :
The soldiers shout around with generous rage,
And in that victory their own presage.
He praised their ardour : inly pleased to see
His host, the flower of Grecian chivalry.
All day he march'd, and all th' ensuing night,
And saw the city with returning light.
The process of the war I need not tell,—
How Theseus conquer'd, and how Creon fell :
Or after, how by storm the walls were won,
Or how the victor sack'd and burn'd the town :
How to the ladies he restored again
The bodies of their lords in battle slain,
And with what ancient rites they were interr'd :
All these to fitter time shall be deferr'd.
I spare the widows' tears, their woful cries,
And howling at their husbands' obsequies ;
How Theseus at these funerals did assist,
And with what gifts the mourning dames dismiss'd.
Thus when the victor-chief had Creon slain,
And conquer'd Thebes, he pitch'd upon the plain
His mighty camp, and when the day return'd,
The country wasted, and the hamlets burn'd ;

And left the pillagers, to rapine bred,
Without controul to strip and spoil the dead.

There, in a heap of slain, among the rest
Two youthful knights they found beneath a load oppress'd

Of slaughter'd foes, whom first to death they sent,
The trophies of their strength, a bloody monument,
Both fair, and both of royal blood they seem'd,
Whom kinsmen to the crown the heralds deem'd ;
That day in equal arms they fought for fame ;
Their swords, their shields, their surcoats were the same.

Close by each other laid they press'd the ground,
Their manly bosoms pierced with many a grisly wound ;

Nor well alive nor wholly dead they were,
But some faint signs of feeble life appear :
The wandering breath was on the wing to part,
Weak was the pulse, and hardly heaved the heart.
These two were sisters' sons ; and Arcite one,
Much famed in fields, with valiant Palamon.
From these their costly arms the spoilers rent,
And softly both convey'd to Theseus' tent ;
Whom known of Creon's line, and cured with care,

He to his city sent, as prisoners of the war,
Hopeless of ransom, and condemn'd to lie
In durance, doom'd a lingering death to die.

This done, he march'd away with warlike sound,
And to his Athens turn'd with laurels crown'd,
Where happy long he lived, much loved, and more renown'd.

But in a tower, and never to be loosed,
The woful captive kinsmen are enclosed.

Thus year by year they pass, and day by day
Till once ('twas on the morn of cheerful May)
The young Emilia, fairer to be seen
Than the fair lily on the flowery green,
More fresh than May herself in blossoms new
(For with the rosy colour strove her hue),
Waked, as her custom was, before the day,
To do th' observance due to sprightly May;
For sprightly May commands our youth to keep
The vigils of her night, and break their sluggard sleep.

Each gentle breast with kindly warmth she moves,
Inspires new flames, revives extinguish'd loves;
In this remembrance Emily ere day
Arose, and dress'd herself in rich array;
Fresh as the month, and as the morning fair:
Adown her shoulders fell her length of hair:
A riband did the braided tresses bind;
The rest was loose, and wanton'd in the wind.
Aurora had but newly chased the night,
And purpled o'er the sky with blushing light,
When to the garden-walk she took her way,
To sport and trip along in cool of day,
And offer maiden vows in honour of the May.

At every turn she made a little stand,
And thrust among the thorns her lily hand
To draw the rose, and every rose she drew
She shook the stalk, and brush'd away the dew
Then party-colour'd flowers of white and red
She wove, to make a garland for her head:

This done, she sung and carol'd out so clear,
That men and angels might rejoice to hear.
E'en wondering Philomel forgot to sing ;
And learn'd from her to welcome in the Spring.
The tower, of which before was mention made,
Within whose keep the captive knights were laid,
Built of a large extent, and strong withal,
Was one partition of the palace wall :
The garden was enclosed within the square,
Where young Emilia took the morning air.

It happen'd, Palamon, the prisoner knight,
Restless for woe, arose before the light,
And, with his jailor's leave, desired to breathe
An air more wholesome than the damps beneath.
This granted, to the tower he took his way,
Cheer'd with a promise of a glorious day :
Then cast a languishing regard around,
And saw with hateful eyes the temples crown'd
With golden spires, and all the hostile ground.
He sigh'd, and turn'd his eyes, because he knew
'Twas but a larger jail he had in view ;
Then look'd below, and from the castle's height
Beheld a nearer and more pleasing sight :
The garden, which before he had not seen,
In spring's new livery clad of white and green,
Fresh flowers in wide parterres, and shady walks between.

This view'd, but not enjoy'd, with arms across
He stood, reflecting on his country's loss ;
Himself an object of the public scorn,
And often wish'd he never had been born.

At last (for so his destiny required)
With walking giddy, and with thinking tired,
He through a little window cast his sight,
Though thick of bars, that gave a scanty light :
But even that glimmering served him to descry
Th' inevitable charms of Emily.

Scarce had he seen, but, seized with sudden smart,
Stung to the quick, he felt it at his heart ;
Struck blind with overpowering light he stood,
Then started back amazed, and cried aloud !

Young Arcite heard ; and up he ran with haste
To help his friend, and in his arms embraced ;
And ask'd him why he look'd so deadly wan,
And whence, and how his change of cheer began ?
Or who had done th' offence ? ' But if,' said he, •
' Your grief alone is hard captivity ;
For love of Heaven, with patience undergo
A cureless ill, since Fate will have it so :
So stood our horoscope in chains to lie,
And Saturn, in the dungeon of the sky,
Or other baleful aspect, ruled our birth,
When all the friendly stars were under earth :
Whate'er betides, by destiny 'tis done,
And better bear like men, than vainly seek to shun.'
' Nor of my bonds,' said Palamon again,
' Nor of unhappy planets I complain ;
But when my mortal anguish caused my cry,
That moment I was hurt through either eye ;
Pierced with a random shaft, I faint away,
And perish with insensible decay :
A glance of some new goddess gave the wound,
Whom, like Actæon, unaware I found.

Look how she walks along yon shady space,
Not Juno moves with more majestic grace ;
And all the Cyprian Queen is in her face.
If thou art Venus (for thy charms confess
That face was form'd in heaven), nor art thou less,
Disguised in habit, undisguised in shape ;
O, help us captives from our chains to 'scape !
But if our doom be pass'd, in bonds to lie
For life, and in a loathsome dungeon die,
Then be thy wrath appeased with our disgrace,
And show compassion to the Theban race,
Oppress'd by tyrant power !' While yet he spoke,
Arcite on Emily had fix'd his look ;
The fatal dart a ready passage found,
And deep within his heart infix'd the wound :
So that if Palamon were wounded sore,
Arcite was hurt as much as he, or more :
Then from his inmost soul he sigh'd, and said,
' The beauty I behold has struck me dead :
Unknowingly she strikes, and kills by chance ;
Poison is in her eyes, and death in every glance.
O ! I must ask ; nor ask alone, but move
Her mind to mercy, or must die for love !'

Thus Arcite : and thus Palamon replies,
(Eager his tone, and ardent were his eyes :)
' Speak'st thou in earnest, or in jesting vein ?'
' Jestings,' said Arcite, ' suits but ill with pain.'
' It suits far worse,' said Palamon again,
And bent his brows, ' with men who honour weigh,
Their faith to break, their friendship to betray ;
But worst with thee, of noble lineage born,
My kinsman, and in arms my brother sworn.

Have we not plighted each our holy oath,
That one should be the common good of both ?
One soul should both inspire, and neither prove
His fellow's hinderance in pursuit of love ?
To this before the gods we gave our hands,
And nothing but our death can break the bands.
This binds thee, then, to further my design ;
As I am bound by vow to further thine :
Nor canst, nor darest thou, traitor, on the plain
Appeach my honour, or thine own maintain ;
Since thou art of my counsel, and the friend
Whose faith I trust, and on whose care depend
And wouldst thou court my lady's love, which I
Much rather than release, would choose to die ?
But thou, false Arcite, never shalt obtain
Thy bad pretence ; I told thee first my pain :
For first my love began ere thine was born ;
Thou, as my counsel, and my brother sworn,
Art bound t' assist my eldership of right,
Or justly to be deem'd a perjured knight.'

Thus Palamon. But Arcite, with disdain,
In haughty language thus replied again :
' Forsworn thyself : the traitor's odious name
I first return, and then disprove thy claim.
If love be passion, and that passion nursed
With strong desires, I loved the lady first.
Canst thou pretend desire, whom zeal inflamed
To worship, and a power celestial named ?
Thine was devotion to the bless'd above,
I saw the woman, and desired her love ;
First own'd my passion, and to thee commend
Th' important secret as my chosen friend.

Suppose (which yet I grant not), thy desire
 A moment elder than my rival fire ;
 Can chance of seeing first thy title prove ?
 And know'st thou not, no law is made for love ?
 Law is to things which to free choice relate ;
 Love is not in our choice, but in our fate ;
 Laws are but positive : Love's power, we see,
 Is Nature's sanction, and her first decree.
 Each day we break the bond of human laws
 For love, and vindicate the common cause.
 Laws for defence of civil rights are placed,
 Love throws the fences down, and makes a general waste :

Maids, widows, wives, without distinction fall ;
 The sweeping deluge, Love, comes on and covers all.
 If then the laws of friendship I transgress,
 I keep the greater, while I break the less ;
 And both are mad alike, since neither can possess.
 Both hopeless to be ransom'd, never more
 To see the sun, but as he passes o'er.'

Like Æsop's hounds contending for the bone,
 Each pleaded right, and would be lord alone :
 The fruitless fight continued all the day ;
 A cur came by, and snatch'd the prize away.
 ' As courtiers therefore juggle for a grant, [want,
 And, when they break their friendship, plead their
 So thou, if fortune will thy suit advance,
 Love on ; nor envy me my equal chance :
 For I must love, and am resolved to try
 My fate, or failing in th' adventure, die !'

Great was their strife, which hourly was renew'd,
 Till each with mortal hate his rival view'd :

Now friends no more, nor walking hand in hand
But when they met, they made a surly stand ;
And glared like angry lions as they pass'd,
And wish'd that every look might be their last.

It chanced at length, Pirithous came, t' attend
This worthy Theseus, his familiar friend :
Their love in early infancy began,
And rose as childhood ripen'd into man
Companions of the war ; and loved so well,
That when one died, as ancient stories tell,
His fellow, to redeem him, went to hell.

But to pursue my tale ; to welcome home
His warlike brother is Pirithous come :
Arcite of Thebes was known in arms long since,
And honour'd by this young Thessalian prince.
Theseus, to gratify his friend and guest,
Who made our Arcite's freedom his request,
Restored to liberty the captive knight,
But on these hard conditions I recite :
That if hereafter Arcite should be found
Within the compass of Athenian ground,
By day or night, or on whate'er pretence,
His head should pay the forfeit of th' offence.
To this, Pirithous, for his friend, agreed,
And on his promise was the prisoner freed.

Unpleased and pensive, hence he takes his way,
At his own peril ; for his life must pay.
Who now but Arcite mourns his bitter fate,
Finds his dear purchase, and repents too late ?
' What have I gain'd,' he said, ' in prison pent,
If I but change my bonds for banishment ?

And banish'd from her sight, I suffer more
In freedom, than I felt in bonds before ;
Forced from her presence, and condemn'd to live ;
Unwelcome freedom, and unthank'd reprieve ;
Heaven is not but where Emily abides,
And where she's absent, all is hell besides.
Next to my day of birth, was that accursed,
Which bound my friendship to Pirithous first :
Had I not known that prince, I still had been
In bondage, and had still Emilia seen :
For though I never can her grace deserve,
'Tis recompense enough to see and serve.
O Palamon, my kinsman and my friend,
How much more happy fates thy love attend !
Thine is th' adventure ; thine the victory :
Well has thy fortune turn'd the dice for thee :
Thou on that angel's face mayst feed thy eyes,
In prison, no ; but blissful paradise !
Thou daily seest that sun of beauty shine,
And lovest at least in love's extremest line.
I mourn in absence, love's eternal night :
And who can tell but since thou hast her sight,
And art a comely, young, and valiant knight,
Fortune (a various power) may cease to frown,
And by some ways unknown thy wishes crown ?
But I, the most forlorn of humankind,
Nor help can hope, nor remedy can find ;
But doom'd to drag my loathsome life in care,
For my reward, must end it in despair.
Fire, water, air, and earth, and force of fates
That governs all, and Heaven that all creates,

Nor art, nor nature's hand can ease my grief ;
Nothing but death, the wretch's last relief :
Then farewell youth, and all the joys that dwell
With youth and life, and life itself, farewell !

‘ But why, alas ! do mortal men in vain
Of fortune, fate, or Providence complain ?
God gives us what he knows our wants require,
And better things than those which we desire :
Some pray for riches ; riches they obtain ;
But, watch'd by robbers, for their wealth are slain ;
Some pray from prison to be freed ; and come,
When guilty of their vows, to fall at home ;
Murder'd by those they trusted with their life,
A favour'd servant, or a bosom wife.
Such dear-bought blessings happen every day,
Because we know not for what things to pray ;
Like drunken sots about the streets we roam :
Well knows the sot he has a certain home,
Yet knows not how to find th' uncertain place,
And blunders on, and staggers every pace.
Thus all seek happiness ; but few can find,
For far the greater part of men are blind.
This is my case, who thought our utmost good
Was in one word of freedom understood :
The fatal blessing came : from prison free,
I starve abroad, and lose the sight of Emily !’

Thus Arcite ; but if Arcite thus deplore
His sufferings, Palamon yet suffers more.
For when he knew his rival freed and gone,
He swells with wrath ; he makes outrageous moan :
He frets, he fumes, he stares, he stamps the ground ;
The hollow tower with clamours rings around :

With briny tears he bathed his fetter'd feet,
 And dropp'd all o'er with agony of sweat.
 ' Alas !' he cried, ' I wretch in prison pine,
 Too happy rival, while the fruit is thine :
 Thou livest at large, thou draw'st thy native air,
 Pleased with thy freedom, proud of my despair :
 Thou mayst, since thou hast youth and courage
 A sweet behaviour, and a solid mind, [join'd,
 Assemble ours, and all the Theban race,
 To vindicate on Athens thy disgrace :
 And after (by some treaty made) possess
 Fair Emily, the pledge of lasting peace :
 So thine shall be the beauteous prize ; while I
 Must languish in despair, in prison die.
 Thus all th' advantage of the strife is thine,
 Thy portion double joys, and double sorrows mine.'

The rage of jealousy then fired his soul,
 And his face kindled like a burning coal :
 Now cold despair, succeeding in her stead,
 To livid paleness turns the glowing red.
 His blood, scarce liquid, creeps within his veins,
 Like water which the freezing wind constrains.
 Then thus he said :—' Eternal deities !
 Who rule the world with absolute decrees,
 And write, whatever time shall bring to pass,
 With pens of adamant on plates of brass ;
 What, is the race of humankind your care,
 Beyond what all his fellow-creatures are ?
 He, with the rest, is liable to pain ;
 And, like the sheep, his brother beast, is slain.
 Cold, hunger, prisons, ills without a cure.
 All these he must, and guiltless oft, endure :

Or does your justice, power, or prescience fail ;
When the good suffer, and the bad prevail ?
What worse to wretched virtue could befall,
If fate or giddy fortune govern'd all ?
Nay, worse than other beasts is our estate ;
Them, to pursue their pleasures, you create :
We, bound by harder laws, must curb our will,
And your commands, not our desires, fulfil :
Then, when the creature is unjustly slain,
Yet, after death at least, he feel: no pain ;
But man, in life surcharged with woe before,
Not freed, when dead, is doom'd to suffer more.
A serpent shoots his sting at unaware ;
An ambush'd thief forelays a traveller ;
The man lies murder'd, while the thief and snake,
One gains the thickets, and one thrids the brake.
This, let divines decide ; but well I know,
Just, or unjust, I have my share of woe.
Through Saturn, seated in a luckless place,
And Juno's wrath, that persecutes my race ;
Or Mars and Venus in a quartile move
My pangs of jealousy for Arcite's love !

Let Palamon, oppress'd in bondage, mourn,
While to his exiled rival we return.
By this the sun, declining from his height,
The day had shorten'd to prolong the night :
The lengthen'd night gave length of misery
Both to the captive lover and the free.
For Palamon in endless prison mourns,
And Arcite forfeits life if he returns.
The banish'd never hopes his love to see,
Nor hopes the captive 'ord his liberty.

'Tis hard to say, who suffers greater pains :
One sees his love, but cannot break his chains ;
One free, and all his motions uncontroul'd,
Beholds whate'er he would, but what he would l hold.

Judge as you please, for I will haste to tell
What fortune to the banish'd knight befell.—

When Arcite was to Thebes return'd again,
The loss of her he loved renew'd his pain ;
What could be worse than never more to see
His life, his soul, his charming Emily ?
He raved with all the madness of despair,
He roar'd, he beat his breast, he tore his hair.
Dry sorrow in his stupid eyes appears,
For wanting nourishment, he wanted tears :
His eyeballs in their hollow sockets sink,
Bereft of sleep, he loathes his meat and drink.
He withers at his heart, and looks as wan
As the pale spectre of a murder'd man ;
That pale turns yellow, and his face receives
The faded hue of sapless boxen leaves :
In solitary groves he makes his moan,
Walks early out, and ever is alone.
Nor mix'd in mirth, in youthful pleasure shares,
But sighs when songs and instruments he hears :
His spirits are so low, his voice is drown'd,
He hears as from afar, or in a swoon,
Like the deaf murmurs of a distant sound :
Uncomb'd his locks, and squalid his attire,
Unlike the trim of love and gay desire ;
But full of museful mopings, which presage
The loss of reason, and conclude in rage.

This, when he had endured a year or more,
Now wholly changed from what he was before,
It happened once that, slumbering as he lay,
He dream'd (his dream began at break of day)
That Hermes o'er his head in air appear'd,
And with soft words his drooping spirits cheer'd :
His hat, adorn'd with wings, disclosed the god,
And in his hand he bore the sleep-compelling rod :
Such as he seem'd, when at his sire's command
On Argus' head he laid the snaky wand.
' Arise !' he said ; ' to conquering Athens go ;
There fate appoints an end of all thy woe !'
The fright awaken'd Arcite with a start,
Against his bosom bounced his heaving heart ;
But soon he said, with scarce recover'd breath,
' And thither will I go, to meet my death.
Sure to be slain ; but death is my desire,
Since in Emilia's sight I shall expire !'
By chance he spied a mirror while he spoke,
And, gazing there, beheld his alter'd look :
Wondering, he saw his features and his hue
So much were changed that scarce himself he knew.
A sudden thought then starting in his mind ;
' Since I in Arcite cannot Arcite find,
The world may search in vain with all their eyes,
But never penetrate through this disguise.
Thanks to the change which grief and sickness give,
In low estate I may securely live,
And see, unknown, my mistress day by day.'
He said ; and clothed himself in coarse array :
A labouring hind in show ; then forth he went,
And to th' Athenian towers his journey bent :

One squire attended, in the same disguise,
Made conscious of his master's enterprise.
Arrived at Athens, soon he came to court,
Unknown, unquestion'd in that thick resort;
Proffering for hire his service at the gate,
To drudge, draw water, and to run or wait.

So fair befell him, that for little gain
He served at first Emilia's chamberlain;
And watchful all advantages to spy,
Was still at hand, and in his master's eye;
And as his bones were big, and sinews strong,
Refused no toil that could to slaves belong:
But from deep wells with engines water drew,
And used his noble hands the wood to hew.
He pass'd a year at least, attending thus
On Emily, and call'd Philostratus.
But never was there man of his degree
So much esteem'd, so well beloved as he.
So gentle of condition was he known,
That through the court his courtesy was blown:
All think him worthy of a greater place,
And recommend him to the royal grace;
That, exercised within a higher sphere,
His virtues more conspicuous might appear.
Thus, by the general voice, was Arcite praised,
And by great Theseus to high favour raised;
Among his menial servants first enroll'd,
And largely entertain'd with sums of gold:
Besides what secretly from Thebes was sent,
Of his own income, and his annual rent;
This well employ'd, he purchased friends and fame,
But cautiously conceal'd from whence it came.

Thus, for three years, he lived with large increase,
In arms, of honour ; and esteem, in peace ;
To Theseus' person he was ever near,
And Theseus for his virtues, held him dear.

BOOK II.

WHILE Arcite lives in bliss, the story turns
Where hopeless Palamon in prison mourns.
For six long years immured, the captive knight
Had dragg'd his chains, and scarcely seen the light :
Lost liberty and love at once he bore ;
His prison pain'd him much, his passion more :
Nor dares he hope his fetters to remove,
Nor ever wishes to be free from love.

But when the sixth revolving year was run,
And May, within the Twins, received the sun ;
Were it by chance, or forceful destiny,
Which forms in causes first whate'er shall be,
Assisted by a friend, one moonless night,
This Palamon from prison took his flight :
A pleasant beverage he prepared before,
Of wine and honey mix'd, with added store
Of opium ; to his keeper this he brought,
Who swallow'd, unaware, the sleepy draught,
And snored secure till morn ; his senses bound
In slumber, and in long oblivion crown'd.

Short was the night, and careful Palamon
Sought the next covert ere the rising sun.
A thick-spread forest near the city lay,
To this, with lengthen'd strides, he took his way
(For far he could not fly, and fear'd the day),
Safe from pursuit, he meant to shun the light,
Till the brown shadows of the friendly night
To Thebes might favour his intended flight.
When to his country come, his next design
Was all the Theban race in arms to join,
And war on Theseus, till he lost his life,
Or won the beauteous Emily to wife.
Thus, while his thoughts the lingering day beguile,
To gentle Arcite let us turn our style ;
Who little dream'd how nigh he was to care.
Till treacherous fortune caught him in the snare.
The morning lark, the messenger of day,
Saluted in her song the morning gray ;
And soon the sun arose, with beams so bright
That all th' horizon laugh'd to see the joyous sight
He, with his tepid rays, the rose renews,
And licks the drooping leaves, and dries the dews ;
When Arcite left his bed, resolved to pay
Observance to the month of merry May ;
Forth on his fiery steed betimes he rode,
That scarcely prints the turf on which he trod :
At ease he seem'd, and, prancing o'er the plains,
Turn'd only to the grove his horse's reins,
The grove I named before ; and, lighted there,
A woodbine-garland sought to crown his hair ;
Then turn'd his face against the rising day,
And raised his voice to welcome in the May :—

‘ For thee, sweet month, the groves green liveries
If not the first, the fairest of the year ; [wear :
For thee the Graces lead the dancing Hours,
And Nature’s ready pencil paints the flowers :
When thy short reign is pass’d, the feverish sun
The sultry tropic fears, and moves more slowly on.
So may thy tender blossoms fear no blight,
Nor goats, with venom’d teeth, thy tendrils bite,
As thou shalt guide my wandering feet to find
The fragrant greens I seek, my brows to bind.’

His vows address’d, within the grove he stray’d,
Till fate or fortune near the place convey’d
His steps where secret Palamon was laid.
Full little thought of him the gentle knight,
Who, flying death, had there conceal’d his flight,
In brakes and brambles hid, and shunning mortal sight ;

And less he knew him for his hated foe,
But fear’d him as a man he did not know.
But as it has been said of ancient years,
That fields are full of eyes, and woods have ears,
For this the wise are ever on their guard,
For, unforeseen (they say) is unprepared.
Uncautious Arcite thought himself alone,
And, less than all, suspected Palamon ;
Who, listening, heard him, while he search’d the grove,

And loudly sung his roundelay of love :
But on the sudden stopp’d, and silent stood,
(As lovers often muse and change their mood ;
Now high as heaven, and then as low as hell ;
Now up, now down, as buckets in a well :

For Venus, like her day, will change her cheer,
And seldom shall we see a Friday clear.)
Thus Arcite, having sung, with alter'd hue
Sunk on the ground, and from his bosom drew
A desperate sigh, accusing heaven and fate,
And angry Juno's unrelenting hate :—
' Cursed be the day when first I did appear ;
Let it be blotted from the calendar,
Lest it pollute the month, and poison all the year,
Still will the jealous queen pursue our race ?
Cadmus is dead, the Theban city was :
Yet ceases not her hate : for all who come
From Cadmus are involved in Cadmus' doom.
I suffer for my blood : unjust decree !
That punishes another's crime on me.
In mean estate I serve my mortal foe,
The man who caused my country's overthrow.
This is not all ; for Juno, to my shame,
Has forced me to forsake my former name :
Arcite I was, Philostratus I am.
That side of heaven is all my enemy :
Mars ruin'd Thebes : his mother ruin'd me.
Of all the royal race remains but one
Besides myself, th' unhappy Palamon,
Whom Theseus holds in bonds, and will not free ;
Without a crime, except his kin to me.
Yet these, and all the rest, I could endure ;
But love's a malady without a cure :
Fierce love has pierced me with his fiery dart,
He fires within, and hisses at my heart.
Your eyes, fair Emily, my fate pursue ;
I suffer for the rest, I die for you.

See how the madmen bleed : behold the gains
With which their master, Love, rewards their pains.
For seven long years, on duty every day,
Lo ! their obedience, and their monarch's pay :
Yet, as in duty bound, they serve him on ;
And ask the fools, they think it wisely done :
Not ease, nor wealth, nor life itself regard,
For 'tis their maxim, love is love's reward !
This is not all ; the fair for whom they strove
Nor knew before nor could suspect their love,
Nor thought, when she beheld the fight from far,
Her beauty was th' occasion of the war.
But sure a general doom on man is pass'd,
And all are fools and lovers, first or last :
This both by others and myself I know,
For I have served their sovereign long ago :
Oft have been caught within the winding train
Of female snares, and felt the lover's pain,
And learn'd how far the god can human hearts constrain.

To this remembrance, and the prayers of those
Who, for th' offending warriors, interpose,
I give their forfeit lives ; on this accord,
I'll do me homage as their sovereign lord ;
And, as my vassals, to their utmost might Assist my person, and assert my right.'
This, freely sworn, the knights their grace obtain'd
Then thus the king his secret thoughts explain'd :
' If wealth, or honour, or a royal race,
Or each, or all, may win a lady's grace,
Then either of you knights may well deserve
A princess born ; and such is she you serve :

The surety which I gave thee, I defy ;
Fool, not to know that love endures no tie ;
And Jove but laughs at lovers' perjury.
Know, I will serve thee fair in thy despite ;
But since thou art my kinsman, and a knight,
Here, have my faith ; to-morrow, in this grove,
Our arms shall plead the titles of our love :
And Heaven so help my right, as I alone [known,
Will come, and keep the cause and quarrel both un-
With arms of proof both for myself and thee ;
Choose thou the best, and leave the worst to me.
And, that at better ease thou mayst abide,
Bedding and clothes I will this night provide,
And needful sustenance, that thou mayst be
A conquest better won, and worthy me.'
His promise Palamon accepts ; but pray'd
To keep it better than the first he made.
Thus fair they parted till the morrow's dawn ;
For each had laid his plighted faith to pawn,
Oh Love ! thou sternly dost thy power maintain,
And wilt not bear a rival in thy reign ;
Tyrants and thou all fellowship disdain.
This was in Arcite proved and Palamon,
Both in despair, yet each would love alone.
Arcite return'd, and, as in honour tied,
His foe with bedding and with food supplied ;
Then, ere the day, two suits of armour sought,
Which, borne before him, on his steed he brought :
Both were of shining steel, and wrought so pure,
As might the strokes of two such arms endure.
Now, at the time, and in th' appointed place,
The challenger and challenged, face to face,

Approach ; each other from afar they knew,
And from afar their hatred changed their hue.
So stands the Thracian herdsman with his spear,
Full in the gap, and hopes the hunted bear,
And hears him rustling in the wood, and sees
His course at distance by the bending trees ;
And thinks, here comes my mortal enemy,
And either he must fall in fight, or I :
This, while he thinks, he lifts aloft his dart ;
A generous chillness seizes every part ;
The veins pour back the blood, and fortify the heart.

Thus pale they meet ; their eyes with fury burn ;
None greets ; for none the greeting will return :
But in dumb surliness, each arm'd with care
His foe profess'd, as brother of the war :
Then both, no moment lost, at once advance
Against each other, arm'd with sword and lance :
They lash, they foin, they pass, they strive to bore
Their corslets, and the thinnest parts explore.
Thus, two long hours, in equal arms they stood,
And wounded, wound ; till both were bathed in blood ;

And not a foot of ground had either got,
As if the world depended on the spot.
Fell Arcite like an angry tiger fared,
And like a lion Palamon appear'd :
Or as two boars whom love to battle draws,
With rising bristles, and with frothy jaws,
Their adverse breasts with tusks oblique they wound,
With grunts and groans the forest rings around :
So fought the knights, and fighting must abide,
Till fate an umpire sends their difference to decide.

The power that ministers to God's decrees,
And executes on earth what Heaven foresees,
Call'd providence, or chance, or fatal sway,
Comes with resistless force, and finds or makes her way.

Nor kings, nor nations, nor united power,
One moment can retard th' appointed hour :
And some one day, some wondrous chance appears,
Which happen'd not in centuries of years :
For sure, whate'er we mortals hate or love,
Or hope or fear, depends on powers above ;
They move our appetites to good or ill,
And by foresight necessitate the will.

In Theseus this appears ; whose youthful joy
Was beasts of chase in forests to destroy :
This gentle knight, inspired by jolly May,
Forsook his easy couch at early day,
And to the woods and wilds pursued his way.
Beside him rode Hippolita, the queen,
And Emily, attired in lively green.
With horns and hounds, and all the tuneful cry,
To hunt a royal hart within the covert nigh :
And as he follow'd Mars before, so now
He serves the goddess of the silver bow.
The way that Theseus took was to the wood
Where the two knights in cruel battle stood :
The land on which they fought, th' appointed place
In which th' uncoupled hounds began the chase.
Thither forth-right he rode to rouse the prey,
'That shaded by the fern in harbour lay ;
And thence dislodged, was wont to leave the wood,
For open fields, and cross the crystal flood.

Approach'd, and looking underneath the sun,
He saw proud Arcite and fierce Palamon
In mortal battle, doubling blow on blow ;
Like lightning flamed their falchions to and fro,
And shot a dreadful gleam ; so strong they struck,
There seem'd less force required to fell an oak.
He gazed with wonder on their equal might,
Look'd eager on, but knew not either knight :
Resolved to learn, he spurr'd his fiery steed
With goring rowels, to provoke his speed.
The minute ended that began the race,
So soon he was betwixt them on the place ;
And, with his sword unsheath'd, on pain of life
Commands both combatants to cease their strife :
Then, with imperious tone, pursues his threat,
' What are you ? Why in arms together met ?
How dares your pride presume against my laws,
As in a listed field to fight your cause,
Unask'd the royal grant : no marshal by
As knightly rites require ; no judge to try ?'
Then Palamon, with scarce-recover'd breath,
Thus hasty spoke : ' We both deserve the death,
And both would die ; for look the world around,
A pair so wretched is not to be found.
Our life's a load ; encumber'd with the charge,
We long to set th' imprison'd soul at large.
Now as thou art a sovereign judge, decree
The rightful doom of death to him and me ;
Let neither find thy grace ; for grace is cruelty.
Me first ! O, kill me first ! and cure my woe ;
Then sheathe the sword of justice on my toe :

Or kill him first ; for when his name is heard,
He, foremost, will receive his due reward.
Arcite of Thebes is he ! thy mortal foe,
On whom thy grace did liberty bestow ;
But first contracted, that if ever found
By day or night upon th' Athenian ground,
His head should pay the forfeit : see return'd
The perjur'd knight, his oath and honour scorn'd !
For this is he, who, with a borrow'd name,
And proffer'd service, to thy palace came,
Now call'd Philostratus : retain'd by thee,
A traitor trusted, and in high degree,
Aspiring to the bed of beauteous Emily.
My part remains — From Thebes my birth I own,
And call myself th' unhappy Palamon.
Think me not like that man ; since no disgrace
Can force me to renounce the honour of my race ;
Know me for what I am ; I broke thy chain,
Nor promised I thy prisoner to remain :
The love of Liberty with life is given,
And life itself th' inferior gift of Heaven.
Thus, without crime, I fled ; but further know,
I, with this Arcite, am thy mortal foe :
Then give me death, since I thy life pursue,
For safeguard of thyself, death is my due.
More wouldst thou know ? I love bright Emily,
And for her sake and in her sight will die :
But kill my rival too : for he no less
Deserves ; and I thy righteous doom will bless ;
Assured, that what I lose, he never shall possess.''
To this replied the stern Athenian prince,
And sourly smiled, ' In owning your offence

You judge yourself ; and I but keep record
In place of law, while you pronounce the word.
Take your desert, the death you have decreed ;
I seal your doom, and ratify the deed.
By Mars, the patron of my arms, you die !'

He said : dumb sorrow seized the standers by.
The queen above the rest, by nature good,
(The pattern form'd of perfect womanhood)
For tender pity wept : when she began,
Through the bright quire th' infectious virtue ran.
All dropp'd their tears, e'en the contended maid ;
And thus, among themselves, they softly said :
' What eyes can suffer this unworthy sight !
Two youths of royal blood, renown'd in fight,
The mastership of Heaven in face and mind,
And lovers, far beyond their faithless kind :
See their wide streaming wounds ; they neither came
For pride of empire nor desire of fame :
Kings fight for kingdoms, madmen for applause ;
But love for love alone ; that crowns the lover's cause !'
This thought, which ever bribes the beauteous kind,
Such pity wrought in every lady's mind,
They left their steeds, and prostrate on the place,
From the fierce king implored th' offenders' grace.

He paused awhile, stood silent in his mood
(For yet his rage was boiling in his blood),
But soon his tender mind th' impression felt
(As softest metals are not slow to melt,
And pity soonest runs in softest minds :)
Then reasons with himself ; and first he finds
His passion cast a mist before his sense,
And either made, or magnified th' offence.

Offence ! of what ? to whom ? Who judged the cause ?

The prisoner freed himself by nature's laws :
Born free, he sought his right : the man he freed
Was perjured, but his love excused the deed.
Thus pondering, he look'd under with his eyes,
And saw the women's tears, and heard their cries ;
Which moved compassion more : he shook his head,
And, softly sighing to himself, he said :—

‘ Curse on th’ unpardoning prince, whom tears can draw

To no remorse ; who rules by lions’ law ;
And deaf to prayers, by no submission bow’d,
Rends all alike, the penitent and proud :’
At this, with look serene, he raised his head,
Reason resumed her place, and passion fled ;
Then thus aloud he spoke : ‘ The power of Love,
In earth, and seas, and air, and Heaven above,
Rules unresisted, with an awful nod ;
By daily miracles declared a god :
He blinds the wise, gives eyesight to the blind ;
And moulds and stamps anew the lover’s mind.
Behold that Arcite, and this Palamon,
Freed from my fetters, and in safety gone ;
What hinder’d either, in their native soil,
At ease to reap the harvest of their toil ?
But Love, their lord, did otherwise ordain,
And brought them in their own despite again,
To suffer death deserved ; for well they know,
’Tis in my power, and I their deadly foe ;
The proverb holds, that to be wise and love
Is hardly granted to the gods above.

Of such a goddess no time leaves record,
 Who burn'd the temple where she was adored :
 And let it burn, I never will complain,
 Pleased with my sufferings, if you knew my pain:

At this a sickly qualm his heart assail'd,
 His ears ring inward, and his senses fail'd.
 No word miss'd Palamon of all he spoke,
 But soon to deadly pale he changed his look :
 He trembled every limb, and felt a smart,
 As if cold steel had glided through his heart ;
 Nor longer staid, but, starting from his place,
 Discover'd stood, and show'd his hostile face :
 ' False traitor, Arcite ! traitor to thy blood,
 Bound by thy sacred oath to seek my good,
 Now art thou found forsworn, for Emily ;
 And darest attempt her love, for whom I die.
 So hast thou cheated Theseus with a wife,
 Against thy vow, returning to beguile
 Under a borrow'd name : as false to me,
 So false thou art to him who set thee free :
 But rest assured, that either thou shalt die,
 Or else renounce thy claim in Emily :
 For though unarm'd I am, and (freed by chance)
 And here without my sword or pointed lance,
 Hope not, base man, unquestion'd hence to go,
 For I am Palamon, thy mortal foe.'

Arcite, who heard this tale, and knew the man,
 His sword unsheath'd, and fiercely thus began :
 ' Now, by the gods, who govern Heaven above !
 Wert thou not weak with hunger, mad with love,
 That word had been thy last ; or in this grove
 This hand should force thee to renounce thy love.

For Emily is sister to the crown,
And but too well to both her beauty known :
But should you combat till you both were dead,
Two lovers cannot share a single bed :
As therefore both are equal in degree,
The lot of both be left to destiny.
Now hear th' award, and happy may it prove
To her, and him who best deserves her love.
Depart from hence in peace, and, free as air,
Search the wide world, and where you please repair ;

But on the day when this returning sun
To the same point through every sign has run,
Then each of you his hundred knights shall bring,
In royal lists, to fight before the king ;
And then, the knight whom fate or happy chance
Shall with his friends to victory advance,
And grace his arms so far in equal fight,
From out the bars to force his opposite,
Or kill, or make him recreant on the plain,
The prize of valour and of love shall gain ;
The vanquish'd party shall their claim release,
And the long jars conclude in lasting peace.
The charge be mine to adorn the chosen ground,
The theatre of war, for champions so renown'd ;
And take the patron's place of either knight,
With eyes impartial to behold the fight ;
And Heaven of me so judge, as I shall judge aright.
If both are satisfied with this accord,
Swear by the laws of knighthood on my sword.'

Who now but Palamon exults with joy ?
And ravish'd Arcite seems to touch the sky.

The whole assembled troop was pleased as well,
Extoll'd th' award, and on their knees they fell
To bless the gracious king. The knights, with leave
Departing from the place, his last commands receive;
On Emily with equal ardour look,
And from her eyes their inspiration took :
From thence to 'Thebes' old walls pursue their way,
Each to provide his champions for the day.

It might be deem'd, on our historian's part,
Or too much negligence or want of art,
If he forgot the vast magnificence
Of royal Theseus, and his large expense.
He first inclosed for lists a level ground.
The whole circumference a mile around :
The form was circular ; and all without
A trench was sunk, to moat the place about.
Within, an amphitheatre appear'd,
Raised in degrees ; to sixty paces rear'd :
That when a man was placed in one degree,
Height was allow'd for him above to see.

Eastward was built a gate of marble white ;
The like adorn'd the western opposite.
A nobler object than his fabric was,
Rome never saw ; nor of so vast a space,
For, rich with spoils of many a conquer'd land,
All arts and artists Theseus could command ;
Who sold for hire, or wrought for better fame,
The master-painters, and the carvers came.
So rose within the compass of the year
An age's work, a glorious theatre.
Then o'er its eastern gate was raised above
A temple, sacred to the queen of love ;

An altar stood below : on either hand
A priest, with roses crown'd, who held a myrtle wand.

The dome of Mars was on the gate opposed ;
And on the north a turret was enclosed,
Within the wall, of alabaster white
And crimson coral, for the queen of night ;
Who takes in silvan sports her chaste delight.

Within these oratories might you see
Rich carvings, portraitures, and imagery ;
Where every figure to the life express'd
The godhead's power to whom it was address'd.
In Venus' temple, on the sides were seen
The broken slumbers of enamour'd men :
Prayers that e'en spoke, and pity seem'd to call,
And issuing sighs that smoked along the wall,
Complaints, and hot desires, the lover's hell,
And scalding tears, that wore a channel where they fell :

And all around were nuptial bonds, the ties
Of love's assurance, and a train of lies,
That, made in lust, concludes in perjuries.
Beauty, and youth, and wealth, and luxury.
And sprightly hope, and short-enduring joy ;
And sorceries to raise th' infernal powers,
And sigils framed in planetary hours ;
Expense, and after-thought, and idle care,
And doubts of motley hue, and dark despair ;
Suspensions, and fantastical surmise,
And Jealousy suffused, with jaundice in her eyes,
Discolouring all she view'd, in tawny dress'd,
Down-look'd, and with a cuckoo on her fist.

Opposed to her, on th' other side, advance
The costly feast, the carol, and the dance,
Minstrels and music, poetry and play,
And balls by night, and tournaments by day.
All these were painted on the wall, and more ;
With acts and monuments of times before :
And others added by prophetic doom,
And lovers yet unborn, and loves to come :
For there, th' Idalian mount, and Citheron,
The court of Venus, was in colours drawn :
Before the palace-gate, in careless dress,
And loose array, sat portress Idleness :
There, by the fount, Narcissus pined alone ;
There Samson was, with wiser Solomon,
And all the mighty names by love undone :
Medea's charms were there, Circean feasts,
With bowls that turn'd euamour'd youths to beasts.
Here might be seen, that beauty, wealth, and wit,
And prowess, to the powers of love submit :
The spreading snare for all mankind is laid ;
And lovers all betray, and are betray'd.
The goddess' self, some noble hand had wrought ;
Smiling she seem'd, and full of pleasing thought :
From ocean as she first began to rise,
And smooth'd the ruffled seas, and clear'd the skies ;
She trod the brine, all bare below the breast,
And the green waves but ill conceal'd the rest :
A lute she held ; and on her head was seen
A wreath of roses red, and myrtles green :
Her turtles fann'd the buxom air above ;
And, by his mother, stood an infant Love

With wings unfledged ; his eyes were banded o'er ;
His hands a bow, his back a quiver bore,
Supplied with arrows bright and keen, a deadly store.

But in the dome of mighty Mars the red,
With different figures all the sides were spread :
This temple, less in form, with equal grace
Was imitative of the first in Thrace :
For that cold region was the loved abode
And sovereign mansion of the warrior-god.
The landscape was a forest wide and bare,
Where neither beast nor humankind repair :
The fowl, that scent afar, the borders fly,
And shun the bitter blast, and wheel about the sky.
A cake of scurf lies baking on the ground,
And prickly stubs, instead of trees, are found ;
Or woods, with knots and knares deformed and old ;
Headless the most, and hideous to behold :
A rattling tempest through the branches went,
That stripp'd them bare, and one sole way they bent.
Heaven froze above, severe ; the clouds congeal,
And through the crystal vault appear'd the standing hail.

Such was the face without ; a mountain stood
Threatening from high, and overlook'd the wood.
Beneath the louring brow, and on a bent,
The temple stood of Mars armipotent :
The frame of burnish'd steel, that cast a glare
From far, and seemed to thaw the freezing air.
A straight long entry to the temple led,
Blind with high walls, and horror overhead :
Thence issued such a blast, and hollow roar,
As threatened from the hinge to heave the door ;

In, through that door, a northern light there shone ;
'Twas all it had, for windows there were none.

The gate was adamant ; eternal frame !
Which, hew'd by Mars himself, from Indian quarries came,

The labour of a god ; and all along
Tough iron plates were clench'd to make it strong.
A tun about was every pillar there ;
A polish'd mirror shone not half so clear.
There saw I how the secret felon wrought,
And treason labouring in the traitor's thought ;
And midwife Time the ripen'd plot to murder brought.

There, the red anger dared the pallid fear ;
Next stood Hypocrisy, with holy leer ;
Soft-smiling, and demurely looking down,
But hid the dagger underneath the gown :
Th' assassinating wife, the household fiend ;
And, far the blackest there, the traitor-friend.
On th' other side there stood destruction bare ;
Unpunish'd rapine, and a waste of war.
Contest, with sharpen'd knives, in cloisters drawn,
And all with blood bespread the holy lawn.
Loud menaces were heard, and foul disgrace,
And bawling infamy, in language base ; [place.
Till sense was lost in sound, and silence fled the
The slayer of himself yet say I there,
The gore congeal'd was clotted in his hair ;
With eyes half closed, and gaping mouth he lay,
And grim, as when he breathed his sullen soul away.
In midst of all the dome, misfortune sat,
And gloomy discontent, and fell debate ;

And madness laughing in his ireful mood ;
And arm'd complaint on theft ; and cries of blood.
There was the murder'd corpse, in covert laid,
And violent death in thousand shapes display'd :
The city to the soldier's rage resign'd :
Successful wars, and poverty behind :
Ships burn'd in fight, or forced on rocky shores,
And the rash hunter strangled by the boars :
The new-born babe by nurses overlaid ;
And the cook caught within the raging fire he made.
All ills of Mars's nature, flame and steel ;
The gasping charioteer beneath the wheel
Of his own car ; the ruin'd house, that falls
And intercepts her lord betwixt the walls :
The whole division that to Mars pertains,
All trades of death that deal in steel for gains,
Were there : the butcher, armourer, and smith
Who forges sharpen'd falchions, or the scythe.
The scarlet conquest on a tower was placed,
With shouts and soldiers' acclamations graced :
A pointed sword hung threatening o'er his head,
Sustain'd but by a slender twine of thread.
There saw I Mars's Ides, the capitol,
The seer in vain foretelling Cæsar's fall,
The last triumvirs, and the wars they move,
And Anthony, who lost the world for love !
These, and a thousand more, the fane adorn ;
Their fates were painted ere the men were born ;
All copied from the heavens, and ruling force
Of the red star, in his revolving course.
The form of Mars high on a chariot stood,
All sheath'd in arms, and gruffly look'd the god :

Two geomantic figures were display'd
Above his head, a warrior and a maid*,
One when direct, and one when retrograde.

Tired with deformities of death, I haste
To the third temple of Diana chaste :—
A silvan scene with various greens was drawn,
Shades on the sides, and in the midst a lawn :
The silver Cynthia, with her nymphs around,
Pursued the flying deer, the woods with horns re-
sound :

Calisto there stood manifest of shame,
And, turn'd a bear, the northern star became :
Her son was next, and by peculiar grace
In the cold circle held the second place :
The stag Acteon in the stream had spied
The naked huntress, and, for seeing, died :
His hounds, unknowing of his change, pursue
The chase, and their mistaken master slew,
Peneian Daphne too was there to see,
Apollo's love before, and now his tree :
Th' adjoining fane th' assembled Greeks express'd,
And hunting of the Calydonian beast ;
Ænides' valour, and his envied prize ;
The fatal power of Atalanta's eyes ;
Diana's vengeance on the victor shown,
The murtheress mother, and consuming son ;
The Volscian queen extended on the plain ;
The treason punish'd, and the traitor slain.
The rest were various huntings, well design'd,
And savage beasts destroy'd, of every kind.

* Rubeus and Puella.

The graceful goddess was array'd in green ;
About her feet were little beagles seen,
'That watch'd with upward eyes the motions of their queen.

Her legs were buskin'd, and the left before,
In act to shoot ; a silver bow she bore,
And at her back a painted quiver wore.
She trod a waxing moon, that soon would wane,
And, 'drinking borrow'd light, be fill'd again :
With downcast eyes, as seeming to survey
The dark dominions, her alternate sway.
Before her stood a woman in her throes,
And call'd Lucina's aid, her burden to disclose.
All these the painter drew with such command,
That Nature snatch'd the pencil from his hand ;
Ashamed and angry, that his heart could feign
And mend the tortures of a mother's pain.
Theseus beheld the fanes of every god,
And thought his mighty cost was well bestow'd.
So princes now their poets should regard ;
But few can write, and fewer can reward.

The theatre thus raised, the lists enclosed,
And all with vast magnificence disposed,
We leave the monarch pleased ; and haste to bring
The knights to combat ; and their arms to sing.

PALAMON AND ARCITE.

BOOK III.

THE day approach'd when fortune should decide
Th' important enterprise, and give the bride ;
For now, the rivals round the world had sought,
And each his number, well appointed, brought.
The nations far and near contend in choice,
And send the flower of war by public voice ;
That after, or before, were never known
Such chiefs ; as each an army seem'd alone.
Beside the champions, all of high degree,
Who knighthood loved, and deeds of chivalry,
Throng'd to the lists, and envied to behold
The names of others, not their own enroll'd.
Nor seems it strange ; for every noble knight,
Who loves the fair, and is endued with might,
In such a quarrel would be proud to fight.
There breathes not scarce a man on British ground
(An isle for love and arms of old renown'd)
But would have sold his life to purchase fame,
To Palamon or Arcite sent his name :

And had the land selected of the best,
Half had come hence, and let the world provide the rest.

A hundred knights with Palamon there came,
Approved in fight, and men of mighty name ;
Their arms were several, as their nations were,
But furnish'd all alike with sword and spear.
Some wore coat-armour, imitating scale ;
And next their skins were stubborn shirts of mail.
Some wore a breastplate and a light jupon *,
Their horses clothed with rich caparison :
Some for defence would leathern bucklers use,
Of folded hides ; and others, shields of Pruce †.
One hung a poleaxe at his saddle-bow,
And one a heavy mace, to stun the foe :
One for his legs and knees provided well,
With jambeux arm'd, and double plates of steel :
This on his helmet wore a lady's glove,
And that, a sleeve embroider'd by his love.

With Palamon, above the rest in place,
Lycurgus came, the surly king of Thrace ;
Black was his beard, and manly was his face :
The balls of his broad eyes roll'd in his head,
And glared betwixt a yellow and a red :
He look'd a lion with a gloomy stare,
And o'er his eyebrows hung his matted hair :
Big-boned, and large of limbs, with sinews strong,
Broad-shoulder'd, and his arms were round and long.
Four milk-white bulls (the Thracian use of old)
Were yoked to draw his car of burnish'd gold.

* A close coat.

† Prussian leather.

Upright he stood, and bore aloft his shield,
Conspicuous from afar, and overlook'd the field.
His surcoat was a bear-skin on his back ;
His hair hung long behind, and glossy raven-black.
His ample forehead bore a coronet,
With sparkling diamonds and with rubies set :
Ten brace, and more, of greyhounds, snowy fair,
And tall as stags, ran loose, and coursed around his chair ;
A match for pards in flight, in grappling for the bear ;
With golden muzzles all their mouths were bound,
And collars of the same their necks surround.
Thus through the fields Lycurgus took his way :
His hundred knights attend in pomp and proud array.

To match this monarch, with strong Arcite came Emetrius, king of Ind, (a mighty name !)
On a bay courser, goodly to behold,
The trappings of his horse emboss'd with barbarous gold.

Not Mars bestrode a steed with greater grace ;
His surcoat o'er his arms was cloth of Thrace,
Adorn'd with pearls, all orient, round, and great ;
His saddle was of gold, with emeralds set.
His shoulders large a mantle did attire,
With rubies thick, and sparkling as the fire :
His amber-colour'd locks in ringlets run
With graceful negligence, and shone against the sun.
His nose was aquiline, his eyes were blue,
Ruddy his lips, and fresh and fair his hue :
Some sprinkled freckles on his face were seen,
Whose dusk set off the whiteness of the skin.

His awful presence did the crowd surprise,
Nor durst the rash spectator meet his eyes ;
Eyes, that confess'd him born for kingly sway,
So fierce, they flash'd intolerable day.
His age in nature's youthful prime appear'd,
And just began to bloom his yellow beard ;
Whene'er he spoke, his voice was heard around,
Loud as a trumpet, with a silver sound ;
A laurel wreath his temples, fresh and green,
And myrtle sprigs, the marks of love, were mix'd between ;

Upon his fist he bore, for his delight,
An eagle well reclaim'd, and lily-white.

His hundred knights attend him to the war,
All arm'd for battle, save their heads were bare.
Words and devices blazed on every shield,
And pleasing was the terror of the field,
For kings, and dukes, and barons you might see,
Like sparkling stars, though different in degree,
All for th' increase of arms, and love of chivalry.
Before the king tame leopards led the way,
And troops of lions innocently play :
So Bacchus through the conquer'd Indies rode,
And beasts in gambols frisk'd before their honest god !

In this array the war of either side
Through Athens pass'd with military pride.
At prime they enter'd, on the Sunday morn ;
Rich tapestry spread the streets, and flowers the posts adorn.

The town was all a jubilee of feasts :
So Theseus will'd, in honour of his guests,

Himself with open arms the king embraced ;
Then all the rest in their degrees were graced,
No harbinger was needful for the night,
For every house was proud to lodge a knight.

I pass the royal treat, nor must relate
The gifts bestow'd, nor how the champions sate ;
Who first, who last, or how the knights address'd
'Their vows, or who was fairest at the feast ;
Whose voice, whose graceful dance did most surprise ;
Soft amorous sighs, and silent love of eyes.
The rivals call my Muse another way,
To sing their vigils for th' ensuing day.

'Twas ebbing darkness, past the noon of night,
And Phosphor, on the confines of the light.
Promised the sun, ere day began to spring ;
'The tuneful lark already stretch'd her wing,
And, flickering on her nest, made short essays to sing :

When wakeful Palamon, preventing day,
Took to the royal lists his early way,
To Venus at her fane, in her own house to pray.
There falling on his knees before her shrine,
He thus implored with prayers her power divine :—
' Creator Venus ! genial power of love !
The bliss of men below and gods above !
Beneath the sliding sun thou runn'st thy race,
Dost fairest shine and best become thy place :
For thee the winds their eastern blasts forbear ;
Thy month reveals the spring, and opens all the year.
Thee, goddess ! thee the storms of winter fly ;
Earth smiles with flowers renewing ; laughs the sky ;
And birds to lays of love their tuneful notes apply.

For thee the lion loathes the taste of blood,
And, roaring, hunts his female through the wood;
For thee the bulls rebellow through the groves,
And tempt the streams, and snuff their absent loves.

'Tis thine whate'er is pleasant, good, or fair;
All nature is thy province, life thy care:
Thou madest the world, and dost the world repair.
Thou gladder of the mount of Cytheron;
Increase of Jove, companion of the sun!
If e'er Adonis touch'd thy tender heart,
Have pity, goddess, for thou know'st the smart.
Alas! I have not words to tell my grief;
To vent my sorrow would be some relief:
Light sufferings give us leisure to complain;
We groan, but cannot speak, in greater pain.
O goddess! tell thyself what I would say;
Thou know'st it, and I feel too much to pray.
So grant my suit as I enforce my might,
In love to be thy champion and thy knight;
A servant to thy sex, a slave to thee,
A foe profess'd to barren chastity.
Nor ask I fame or honour of the field;
Nor choose I more to vanquish than to yield:
In my divine Emilia make me bless'd,
Let fate or partial chance dispose the rest:
Find thou the manner and the means prepare;
Possession, more than conquest, is my care.
Mars is the warrior's god; in him it lies,
On whom he favours to confer the prize;
With smiling aspect you serenely move
In your fifth orb, and rule the realm of love.

The Fates but only spin the coarser clue ;
The finest of the wool is left for you.
Spare me but one small portion of the twine,
And let the Sisters cut below your line ;
The rest among the rubbish may they sweep,
Or add it to the yarn of some old miser's heap.
But if you this ambitious prayer deny
(A wish, I grant, beyond mortality),
Then let me sink beneath proud Arcite's arms,
And I once dead, let him possess her charms !'

Thus ended he : then, with observance due,
The sacred incense on her altar threw.
The curling smoke mounts heavy from the fires ;
At length it catches flame, and in a blaze expires :
At once the gracious goddess gave the sign,
Her statue shook, and trembled all the shrine.
Pleased, Palamon the tardy omen took ;
For, since the flames pursued the trailing smoke,
He knew his boon was granted : but the day [delay.
To distance driven, and joy adjourn'd with long

Now morn with rosy light had streak'd the sky,
Up rose the sun, and up rose Emily ;
Address'd her early steps to Cynthia's fane,
In state, attended by her maiden train,
Who bore the vests that holy rites require,
Incense, and odorous gums, and cover'd fire.
The plenteous horns with pleasant mead they crown,
Nor wanted aught besides in honour of the moon.
Now, while the temple smoked with hallowed steam,
They wash the virgin in a living stream.
The secret ceremonies I conceal,
Uncouth, perhaps unlawful, to reveal :

But such they were as pagan use required,
Perform'd by women when the men retired ;
Whose eyes profane, their chaste mysterious rites
Might turn to scandal or obscene delights.
Well-meaners think no harm ; but for the rest,
Things sacred they pervert, and silence is the best.
Her shining hair, uncomb'd, was loosely spread,
A crown of mastless oak adorn'd her head,
When, to the shrine approach'd, the spotless maid
Had kindling fires on either altar laid
(The rites were such as were observed of old,
By Statius in his Theban story told) ;
Then kneeling, with her hands across her breast,
Thus lowly she preferr'd her chaste request :—

‘ O goddess ! haunter of the woodland green,
To whom both heaven, and earth, and seas are seen,
Queen of the nether skies, where half the year
Thy silver beams descend, and light the gloomy sphere ;

Goddess of maids ! and conscious of our hearts,
So keep me from the vengeance of thy darts,
Which Niobe's devoted issue felt, [were dealt,
When hissing through the skies the feather'd deaths
As I desire to live a virgin life,
Nor know the name of mother or of wife.
Thy votaress from my tender years I am,
And love, like thee, the woods and silvan game.
Like death, thou know'st, I loathe the nuptial state ;
And man, the tyrant of our sex, I hate ;
A lowly servant, but a lofty mate.
Where love is duty on the female side, [pride.
On theirs mere sensual gust, and sought with surly

Now by thy triple shape, as thou art seen
In heaven, earth, hell, and every where a queen,
Grant this, my first desire : let discord cease,
And make betwixt the rivals lasting peace ;
Quench their hot fire, or far from me remove
The flame, and turn it on some other love.
Or if my frowning stars have so decreed
That one must be rejected, one succeed,
Make him my lord within whose faithful breast
Is fix'd my image, and who loves me best.
But, oh ! e'en that avert ! I choose it not ;
But take it as the least unhappy lot.
A maid I am, and of thy virgin train ;
Oh, let me still that spotless name retain !
Frequent the forests, thy chaste will obey,
And only make the beasts of chase my prey !'

The flames ascend on either altar clear,
While thus the blameless maid address'd her prayer,
When lo ! the burning fire, that shone so bright,
Flew off, all sudden, with extinguish'd light,
And left one altar dark, a little space,
Which turn'd, self-kindled, and renew'd the blaze :
The other victor-flame a moment stood,
Then fell, and lifeless left th' extinguish'd wood ;
For ever lost, th' irrevocable light
Forsook the blackening coals and sunk to night :
At either end it whistled as it flew,
And as the brands were green, so dropp'd the dew,
Infected, as it fell, with sweat of sanguine hue.

The maid from that ill omen turn'd her eyes,
And with loud shrieks and clamours rent the skies ;

Nor knew what signified the boding sign,
But found the powers displeased, and fear'd the wrath divine.

Then shook the sacred shrine, and sudden light
Sprung through the vaulted roof, and made the temple bright.

The power, behold ! the power in glory shone,
By her bent bow and her keen arrows known ;
The rest, a huntress issuing from the wood,
Reclining on her cornel spear she stood.

Then gracious thus began :—‘ Dismiss thy fear,
And Heaven’s unchanged decrees attentive hear :
More powerful gods have torn thee from my side,
Unwilling to resign, and doom’d a bride :

The two contending knights are weigh’d above ;
One Mars protects, and one the queen of Love ;
But which the man, is in the Thunderer’s breast,
This he pronounced—’tis he who loves thee best.

The fire, that once extinct revived again,
Foreshows the love allotted to remain :

Farewell !’ she said, and vanish’d from the place :
The sheaf of arrows shook, and rattled in the case.
Aghast at this, the royal virgin stood
Disclaim’d, and now no more a sister of the wood :
But to the parting goddess thus she pray’d :

‘ Propitious still be present to my aid,
Nor quite abandon your once favour’d maid !’
Then, sighing, she return’d ; but smiled betwixt,
With hopes and fears, and joys with sorrows mix’d.

The next returning planetary hour
Of Mars, who shared the heptarchy of power,

His steps bold Arcite to the temple bent,
T'adore with pagan rites the power armipotent :
Then prostrate low before his altar lay,
And raised his manly voice, and thus began to pray :
' Strong God of Arms, whose iron sceptre sways
The freezing north and Hyperborean seas,
And Scythian colds, and Thracia's winter coast,
Where stand thy steeds, and thou art honour'd most :

There most ; but every where thy power is known .
The fortune of the fight is all thy own :
Terror is thine, and wild amazement flung
From out thy chariot, withers e'en the strong ;
And disarray and shameful route ensue,
And force is added to the fainting crew .
Acknowledged as thou art, accept my pray'r :
If aught I have achieved deserve thy care ;
If to my utmost power, with sword and shield ,
I dared the death, unknowing how to yield ;
And, falling in my rank, still kept the field :
Then let my arms prevail, by thee sustain'd,
That Emily by conquest may be gain'd .
Have pity on my pains ; nor those unknown
To Mars, which, when a lover, were his own .
Venus, the public care of all above,
Thy stubborn heart has soften'd into love :
Now, by her blandishments and powerful charms,
When, yielded, she lay curling in thy arms ;
Even by thy shame, if shame it may be call'd,
When Vulcan had thee in his net exthrall'd ;
O envied ignominy ! sweet disgrace !
When every god that saw thee wish'd thy place !

By those dear pleasures, aid my arms in fight,
And make me conquer in my patron's right :
For I am young, a novice in the trade,
The fool of love, unpractis'd to persuade ;
And want the soothing arts that catch the fair,
But, caught myself, lie struggling in the snare :
And she I love, or laughs at all my pain, [dain.
Or knows her worth too well, and pays me with dis-
For sure I am, unless I win in arms,
To stand excluded from Emilia's charms :
Nor can my strength avail, unless by thee
Endued with force, I gain the victory :
Then for the fire which warm'd thy generous heart,
Pity thy subject's pains and equal smart :
So be the morrow's sweat and labour mine ;
The palm and honour of the conquest thine.
Then shall the war, and stern debate, and strife
Immortal, be the business of my life ;
And in thy fane, the dusty spoils among,
High on the burnish'd roof my banners shall be hung,
Rank'd with my champions' bucklers ; and below,
With arms reversed, th' achievements of my foe :
And while these limbs the vital spirit feeds,
While day to night, and night to day succeeds,
Thy smoking altars shall be fat with food
Of incense, and the grateful steam of blood ;
Burnt-offerings morn and evening shall be thine,
And fires eternal in thy temple shine.
The bush of yellow beard, this length of hair,
Which from my birth inviolate I bear,
Guiltless of steel, and from the razor free,
Shall fall, a plenteous crop, reserved for thee.

So may my arms with victory be bless'd,
I ask no more, let fate dispose the rest !'

The champion ceased : there follow'd in the close
A hollow groan ; a murmuring wind arose ;
The rings of iron that on the doors were hung
Sent out a jarring sound, and harshly rung :
The bolted gates flew open at the blast ;
The storm rush'd in ; and Arcite stood aghast !
The flames were blown aside, yet shone they bright,
Fann'd by the wind, and gave a ruffled light.

Then from the ground a scent began to rise,
Sweet smelling, as accepted sacrifice :
This omen pleased ; and as the flames aspire,
With odorous incense Arcite heaps the fire :
Nor wanted hymns to Mars, or heathen charms ;
At length the nodding statue clash'd his arms,
And with a sullen sound and feeble cry,
Half sunk and half pronounced the word of Victory !
For this, with soul devout, he thank'd the god ;
And, of success secure, return'd to his abode.

These vows, thus granted, raised a strife above,
Betwixt the god of War and queen of Love.
She granted first, had right of time to plead ;
But he had granted too, nor would recede.
Jove was for Venus, but he fear'd his wife,
And seem'd unwilling to decide the strife ;
Till Saturn from his leaden throne arose,
And found a way the difference to compose :
Though sparing of his grace, to mischief bent,
He seldom does a good with good intent.
Wayward, but wise ; by long experience taught ;
To please both parties, for ill ends, he sought :

For this advantage age from youth has won,
As, not to be outridden, though outrun.
By fortune he was now to Venus trined*,
And with stern Mars in Capricorn was join'd :
Of him disposing in his own abode,
He sooth'd the goddess, while he gull'd the god: -
' Cease, daughter, to complain, and stint the strife,
Thy Palamon shall have his promised wife ;
And Mars, the lord of conquest, in the fight,
With palm and laurel shall adorn his knight.
Wide is my course, nor turn I to my place
Till length of time, and move with tardy pace.
Man feels me when I press th' ethereal plains ;
My hand is heavy, and the wound remains.
Mine is the shipwreck, in a watery sign ;
And in an earthy, the dark dungeon mine.
Cold shivering agues, melancholy care,
And bitter blasting winds, and poison'd air
Are mine ; and wilful death, resulting from despair.
The throttling quinsy 'tis my star appoints,
And rheumatisms I send, to rack the joints.
When churls rebel against their native prince,
I arm their hands, and furnish the pretence ;
And, housing in the lion's hateful sign,
Bought senators and deserting troops are mine.
Mine is the privy poisoning ; I command
Unkindly seasons and ungrateful land.
By me kings' palaces are push'd to ground,
And miners crush'd beneath their mines are found ;

* Trine is an aspect of planets supposed by astrologers to be eminently benign.

'Twas I slew Samson, when the pillar'd hall
Fell down, and crush'd the many with the fall :
My looking is the sire of pestilence,
That sweeps at once the people and the prince.
Now weep no more, but trust thy grandsire's art ;
Mars shall be pleased, and thou perform thy part.
'Tis ill, though different your complexions are,
The family of heaven for men should war.'
Th' expedient pleas'd, where neither lost his right :
Mars had the day, and Venus had the night.
The management they left to Chronos' care :
Now turn we to th' effect, and sing the war.

In Athens all was pleasure, mirth, and play,
All proper to the spring and sprightly May ;
Which every soul inspired with such delight,
'Twas justing all the day, and love at night.
Heaven smiled, and gladdened was the heart of man ;
And Venus had the world as when it first began.
At length in sleep their bodies they compose,
And dream'd the future fight, and early rose.

Now scarce the dawning day began to spring,
As, at a signal given, the streets with clamours ring :
At once the crowd arose ; confused and high,
E'en from the heavens was heard a shouting cry ;
For Mars was early up, and roused the sky.
The gods came downward to behold the wars,
Sharpening their sights, and leaning from their stars.

The neighing of the generous horse was heard,
For battle by the busy groom prepared ;
Rustling of harness, rattling of the shield,
Clattering of armour furbish'd for the field.

Crowds to the castle mounted up the street,
Battering the pavement with their coursers' feet :
The greedy sight might there devour the gold
Of glittering arms, too dazzling to behold ;
And polish'd steel, that cast the view aside,
And crested morions with their plummy pride.
Knights, with a long retinue of their squires,
In gaudy liveries march, and quaint attires :
One laced the helm, another held the lance,
A third the shining buckler did advance.
The courser paw'd the ground with restless feet,
And snorting foam'd, and champ'd the golden bit.
The smiths and armourers on palfreys ride,
Files in their hands, and hammers at their side,
And nails for loosen'd spears, and thongs for shields provide.

The yeomen guard the streets in seemly bands,
And clowns come crowding on with cudgels in their hands.

The trumpets, next the gate in order placed,
Attend the sign to sound the martial blast :
The palace-yard is fill'd with floating tides,
And the last comers bear the former to the sides.
The throng is in the midst : the common crew
Shut out, the hall admits the better few.
In knots they stand, or in a rank they walk,
Serious in aspect, earnest in their talk :
Factionous, and favouring this or th' other side,
As their strong fancies and weak reason guide.
Their wagers back their wishes : numbers hold
With the fair freckled king, and beard of gold ;
So vigorous are his eyes, such rays they cast,
So prominent his eagle's beak is placed.

But most their looks on the black monarch bend,
His rising muscles and his brawn commend ;
His double-biting axe and beamy spear,
Each asking a gigantic force to rear.
All spoke as partial favour moved the mind,
And, safe themselves, at others' cost divined.

Waked by the cries, th' Athenian chief arose,
The knightly forms of combat to dispose ;
And, passing through th' obsequious guards, he sate
Conspicuous on a throne, sublime in state.
There, for the two contending knights he sent :
Arm'd cap-a-pee, with reverence low they bent :
He smiled on both, and with superior look,
Alike their offer'd adoration took.

The people press on every side to see
Their awful prince, and hear his high decree.
Then signing to their heralds with his hand,
They gave his orders from their lofty stand.
Silence is thrice enjoin'd ; then thus aloud [crowd :
The king at arms bespeaks the knights and listening

‘ Our sovereign lord has pondered in his mind
The means to spare the blood of gentle kind ;
And of his grace and inborn clemency,
He modifies his first severe decree :
The keener edge of battle to rebate,
The troops for honour fighting, not for hate,
He wills, not death should terminate their strife ;
And wounds, if wounds ensue, be short of life ;
But issues, ere the fight, his dread command,
That slings afar, and poignards hand to hand,
Be banish'd from the field ; that none shall dare
With shorten'd sword to stab in closer war ;

But in fair combat fight, with manly strength ;
Nor push with biting point, but strike at length.
The tourney is allow'd but one career
Of the tough ash with the sharp-grinded spear :
But knights unhorsed may rise from off the plain,
And fight on foot their honour to regain.
Nor, if at mischief taken, on the ground
Be slain, but prisoners to the pillar bound,
At either barrier placed ; or, captives made,
Be freed ; or, arm'd anew, the fight invade.
The chief of either side bereft of life,
Or yielded to his foe, concludes the strife. [young,
Thus dooms the lord : now, valiant knights and Fight each his fill with swords and maces long.'
The herald ends : the vaulted firmament
With loud acclaims and vast applause is rent :
' Heaven guard a prince so gracious and so good,
So just, and yet so provident of blood !'
This was the general cry. The trumpet's sound
And warlike symphony is heard around.
The marching troops through Athens take their way
The great earl-marshal orders their array.
The fair from high the passing pomp behold ;
A rain of flowers is from the windows roll'd.
The casements are with golden tissue spread,
And horses' hoofs, for earth, on silken tapestry tread.
The king goes midmost, and the rivals ride
In equal rank, and close his either side.
Next after these, there rode the royal wife,
With Emily, the cause and the reward of strife.
The following cavalcade by three and three,
Proceed by titles marshal'd in degree.

Thus through the southern gate they take their way,
And at the lists arrived, ere prime of day.
There, parting from the king, the chiefs divide,
And wheeling east and west, before their meny ride,
Th' Athenian monarch mounts his throne on high,
And after him the queen and Emily :
Next these, the kindred of the crown are graced
With nearer seats, and lords by ladies placed.
Scarce were they seated, when with clamours loud
In rush'd at once a rude promiscuous crowd :
The guards and then each other overbare,
And in a moment throng the spacious theatre.
Now changed the jarring noise to whispers low,
As winds forsaking seas more softly blow.
When at the western gate, on which the car
Is placed aloft that bears the god of War,
Proud Arcite, entering arm'd before his train,
Stops at the barrier and divides the plain :
Red was his banner, and display'd abroad
The bloody colours of his patron-god.

At that self moment enters Palamon
The gate of Venus and the rising sun ;
Waved by the wanton winds, his banner flies,
All maiden white, and shares the people's eyes.
From east to west, look all the world around,
Two troops so match'd were never to be found :
Such bodies built for strength, of equal age,
In stature sized ; so proud an equipage :
The nicest eye could no distinction make,
Where lay th' advantage, or what side to take.
Thus ranged, the herald for the last proclaims
A silence, while they answer'd to their names :

For so the king decreed, to shun with care
The fraud of musters false, the common bane of war,
The tale was just, and then the gates were closed ;
And chief to chief, and troop to troop opposed.
The heralds last retired, and loudly cried,
' The fortune of the field be fairly tried !'

At this, the challenger with fierce defy
His trumpet sounds ; the challenged makes reply :
With clangour rings the field, resounds the vaulted sky.

Their vizors closed, their lances in the rest,
Or at the helmet pointed, or the crest ;
They vanish from the barrier, speed the race,
And, spurring, see decrease the middle space.
A cloud of smoke envelopes either host,
And all at once the combatants are lost.
Darkling they join adverse, and shock unseen,
Coursers with coursers justling, men with men ;
As labouring in Eclipse, awhile they stay,
Till the next blast of wind restores the day.
They look anew : the beauteous form of fight
Is changed, and war appears a grisly sight.
Two troops in fair array one moment show'd,
The next, a field with fallen bodies strow'd :
Not half the number in their seats are found ;
But men and steeds lie grovelling on the ground,
The points of spears are stuck within the shield,
The steeds without their riders scour the field.
The knights unhorsed on foot renew the fight ;
The glittering falchions cast a gleaming light :
Hauberks and helms are hew'd with many a wound ;
Out spins the streaming blood, and dyes the ground.

The mighty maces with such haste descend, [bend.
They break the bones, and make the solid armour
This thrusts amid the throng with furious force ;
Down goes, at once, the horseman and the horse :
That courser stumbles on the fallen steed,
And, floundering, throws the rider o'er his head.
One rolls along, a football to his foes ;
One with a broken truncheon deals his blows.
This halting, this disabled with his wound,
In triumph led, is to the pillar bound,
Where, by the king's award, he must abide :
There goes a captive led on th' other side.
By fits they cease ; and leaning on the lance,
Take breath a while, and to new fight advance.
Full oft the rivals met, and neither spared
His utmost force, and each forgot to ward.
The head of this was to the saddle bent,
That other backward to the crupper sent ;
Both were by turns unhorsed ; the jealous blows
Fall thick and heavy, when on foot they close.
So deep their falchions bite, that every stroke
Pierced to the quick ; and equal wounds they gave and Borne far asunder by the tides of men, [took.
Like adamant and steel they meet again.
So when a tiger sucks the bullock's blood,
A famish'd lion issuing from the wood
Roars lordly fierce, and challenges the food ;
Each claims possession, neither will obey,
But both their paws are fasten'd on the prey :
They bite, they tear ; and while in vain they strive,
The swains come arm'd between, and both to distance drive.

At length, as fate foredoom'd, and all things tend
By course of time to their appointed end ;
So when the sun to west was far declined,
And both afresh in mortal battle join'd,
'The strong Emetrius came in Arcite's aid,
And Palamon with odds was overlaid :
For turning short, he struck with all his might
Full on the helmet of th' unwary knight.
Deep was the wound ; he stagger'd with the blow,
And turn'd him to his unexpected foe ;
Whom with such force he struck, he fell'd him down,

And cleft the circle of his golden crown.
But Arcite's men, who now prevail'd in fight,
'Twice ten at once surround the single knight :
O'erpower'd at length, they force him to the ground,
Unyielded as he was, and to the pillar bound ;
And king Lycurgus, while he fought in vain
His friend to free, was tumbled on the plain.

Who now laments but Palamon, compell'd
No more to try the fortune of the field !
And worse than death, to view with hateful eyes
His rival's conquest, and renounce the prize !

The royal judge on his tribunal placed,
Who had beheld the fight from first to last,
Bade cease the war : pronouncing from on high
' Arcite of Thebes had won the beauteous Emily.'
The sound of trumpets to the voice replied,
And round the royal lists the heralds cried,
' Arcite of Thebes has won the beauteous bride !'

The people rend the skies with vast applause ;
All own the chief, when fortune owns the cause.

Arcite is own'd, e'en by the gods above,
And conquering Mars insults the queen of Love.
So laugh'd he when the rightful Titan fail'd,
And Jove's usurping arms in heaven prevail'd.
Laugh'd all the powers who favour tyranny,
And all the standing army of the sky.
But Venus with dejected eyes appears,
And, weeping, on the lists distill'd her tears ;
Her will refused, which grieves a woman most,
And in her champion foil'd, the cause of love is lost.
Till Saturn said, ' Fair daughter, now be still,
The blustering fool has satisfied his will :
His boon is given ; his knight has gained the day,
But lost the prize ; th' arrears are yet to pay.
Thy hour is come, and mine the care shall be
To please thy knight, and set thy promise free.'

Now while the heralds run the lists around,
And ' Arcite, Arcite,' heaven and earth resound :
A miracle (nor less it could be call'd)
Their joy with unexpected sorrow pall'd.
The victor-knight had laid his helm aside,
Part for his ease, the greater part for pride ;
Bare-headed, popularly low he bow'd,
And paid the salutations of the crowd.
Then spurring at full speed, ran endlong on Where Theseus sate on his imperial throne ;
Furious he drove, and upward cast his eye,
Where, next the queen, was placed his Emily ;
Then passing, to the saddle-bow he bent,
A sweet regard the gracious virgin lent
(For women, to the brave an easy prey,
Still follow fortune, where she leads the way) :

Just then, from earth sprung out a flashing fire,
By Pluto sent, at Saturn's bad desire :
The startling steed was seized with sudden fright,
And, bounding, o'er the pommel cast the knight :
Forward he flew, and pitching on his head,
He quiver'd with his feet, and lay for dead.
Black was his countenance in a little space,
Nor all the blood was gather'd in his face.
Help was at hand : they rear'd him from the ground,
And from his cumbrous arms his limbs unbound ;
Then lanced a vein, and watch'd returning breath ;
It came, but clogg'd with symptoms of his death.
The saddle-bow the noble parts had press'd,
All bruised and mortified his manly breast,
Him still entranced, and in a litter laid,
'They bore from field, and to his bed convey'd.
At length he waked, and, with a feeble cry,
The word he first pronounced was ' Emily.'

Meantime the king, though inwardly he mourn'd,
In pomp triumphant to the town return'd,
Attended by the chiefs, who fought the field
(Now friendly mix'd, and in one troop compell'd).
Composed his looks to counterfeited cheer,
And bade them not for Arcite's life to fear.
But that which gladdened all the warrior-train,
Though most were sorely wounded, none were slain
The surgeons soon despoil'd them of their arms,
And some with salves they cure, and some with charms ;
Foment the bruises, and the pains assuage,
And heal their inward hurts with sovereign draughts of sage.

The king in person visits all around,
Comforts the sick, congratulates the sound;
Honours the princely chiefs, rewards the rest,
And holds for thrice three days a royal feast.
None was disgraced; for falling is no shame;
And cowardice alone is loss of fame.
The venturous knight is from his saddle thrown;
But 'tis the fault of fortune, not his own.
If crowns and palms the conquering side adorn,
The victor under better stars was born:
The brave man seeks not popular applause,
Nor overpower'd with arms deserts his cause;
Unshamed, though foil'd, he does the best he can;
Force is of brutes, but honour is of man.

Thus Theseus smiled on all with equal grace;
And each was set according to his place.
With ease were reconciled the differing parts,
For envy never dwells in noble hearts.
At length they took their leave, the time expired,
Well pleased; and to their several homes retired.

Meanwhile the health of Arcite still impairs;
From bad proceeds to worse, and mocks the leeches'
cares:

Swoln is his breast, his inward pains increase,
All means are used, and all without success.
The clotted blood lies heavy on his heart,
Corrupts, and there remains in spite of art:
Nor breathing veins nor cupping will prevail:
All outward remedies and inward fail:
The mould of nature's fabric is destroy'd,
Her vessels discomposed, her virtue void:

The bellows of his lungs begin to swell :
All out of frame is every secret cell,
Nor can the good receive, nor bad expel.
Those breathing organs, thus within oppress'd,
With venom soon distend the sinews of his breast.
Nought profits him to save abandon'd life,
Nor vomit's upward aid, nor downward laxitive.
The midmost region batter'd and destroy'd,
When nature cannot work, th' effect of art is void ;
For physic can but mend our crazy state,
Patch an old building, not a new create.
Arcite is doom'd to die in all his pride,
Must leave his youth, and yield his beauteous bride,
Gain'd hardly, against right, and unenjoy'd.
When 'twas declared all hope of life was pass'd,
Conscience (that of all physic works the last)
Caused him to send for Emily in haste,
With her, at his desire, came Palamon ;
Then, on his pillow raised, he thus begun :
 ' No language can express the smallest part
Of what I feel and suffer in my heart
For you, whom best I love and value most ;
But to your service I bequeath my ghost ;
Which, from this mortal body, when untied,
Unseen, unheard, shall hover at your side ;
Nor fright you waking, nor your sleep offend,
But wait officious, and your steps attend :
How I have loved, excuse my faltering tongue,
My spirits feeble, and my pains are strong :
This I may say, I only grieve to die
Because I lose my charming Emily :

To die, when Heaven had put you in my power,
Fate could not choose a more malicious hour!
What greater curse could envious fortune give,
Than just to die when I began to live!
Vain men, how vanishing a bliss we crave,
Now warm in love, now withering in the grave!
Never, O! never more to see the sun!
Still dark, in a damp vault, and still alone!
This fate is common; but I lose my breath
Near bliss, and yet not bless'd before my death.
Farewell! but take me dying in your arms,
'Tis all I can enjoy of all your charms:
This hand I cannot but in death resign;
Ah, could I live! but while I live 'tis mine.
I feel my end approach, and thus embraced,
Am pleased to die; but hear me speak my last.
Ah! my sweet foe, for you, and you alone,
I broke my faith with injured Palamon.
But love the sense of right and wrong confounds,
Strong love and proud ambition have no bounds.
And much I doubt, should Heaven my life prolong,
I should return to justify my wrong:
For while my former flames remain within,
Repentance is but want of power to sin.
With mortal hatred I pursued his life,
Nor he, nor you were guilty of the strife;
Nor I, but as I loved: yet all combined,
Your beauty, and my impotence of mind,
And his concurrent flame that blew my fire;
For still our kindred souls had one desire.
He had a moment's right in point of time;
Had I seen first, then his had been the crime.

Fate made it mine, and justified his right ;
 Nor holds this earth a more deserving knight,
 For virtue, valour, and for noble blood,
 Truth, honour, all that is comprised in good ;
 So help me Heaven ! in all the world is none
 So worthy to be loved as Palamon.

He loves you too with such a holy fire
 As will not, cannot but with life expire :
 Our vow'd affections both have often tried,
 Nor any love but yours could ours divide.
 Then, by my love's inviolable band,
 By my long suffering, and my short command,
 If e'er you plight your vows when I am gone,
 Have pity on the faithful Palamon !'

This was his last ; for Death came on amain,
 And exercised below his iron reign ;
 Then upward to the seat of life he goes ;
 Sense fled before him, what he touch'd he froze ;
 Yet could he not his closing eyes withdraw,
 Though less and less of Emily he saw :
 So speechless for a little space he lay, [away.
 Then grasp'd the hand he held, and sigh'd his soul
 But whither went his soul, let such relate
 Who search the secrets of the future state :
 Divines can say but what themselves believe ;
 Strong proofs they have, but not demonstrative ;
 For, were all plain, then all sides must agree,
 And faith itself be lost in certainty.
 To live uprightly then is sure the best,
 To save ourselves, and not to damn the rest.
 The soul of Arcite went where heathens go
 Who better live than we, though less they know.

In Palamon a manly grief appears ;
Silent he wept, ashamed to show his tears :
Emilia shriek'd but once, and then, oppress'd
With sorrow, sunk upon her lover's breast :
Till Theseus, in his arms convey'd with care,
Far from so sad a sight, the swooning fair.
'Twere loss of time her sorrow to relate ;
Ill bears the sex a youthful lover's fate,
When just approaching to the nuptial state.
But like a low-hung cloud, it rains so fast
That all at once it falls, and cannot last.
The face of things is changed, and Athens now,
That laugh'd so late, becomes the scene of woe :
Matrons and maids, both sexes, every state
With tears lament the knight's untimely fate.
Not greater grief in falling Troy was seen
For Hector's death ; but Hector was not then.
Old men with dust deform'd their hoary hair,
The women beat their breasts, their cheeks they tear.

' Why wouldst thou go (with one consent they cry),
When thou hadst gold enough, and Emily !'
Theseus himself, who should have cheer'd the grief
Of others, wanted now the same relief.
Old Egeus only could revive his son,
Who various changes of the world had known,
And strange vicissitudes of human fate,
Still altering, never in a steady state :
Good after ill, and after pain delight ;
Alternate, like the scenes of day and night.
' Since every man who lives is born to die,
And none can boast sincere felicity ;

With equal mind what happens let us bear, [care,
Nor joy nor grieve too much for things beyond our
Like pilgrims, to th' appointed place we tend ;
The world's an inn, and death the journey's end.
E'en kings but play ; and when their part is done,
Some other, worse or better, mount the throne.'
With words like these the crowd was satisfied,
And so they would have been, had Theseus died.
But he, their king, was labouring in his mind,
A fitting place for funeral pomps to find,
Which were in honour of the dead design'd.
And after long debate, at last he found
(As love itself had mark'd the spot of ground)
That grove for ever green, that conscious land,
Where he with Palamon fought hand to hand :
That where he fed his amorous desires
With soft complaints, and felt his hottest fires,
There other flames might waste his earthly part,
And burn his limbs, where love had burn'd his heart.

This once resolv'd, the peasants were enjoin'd
Sere wood and firs and dodder'd oaks to find.
With sounding axes to the grove they go,
Fell, split, and lay the fuel on a row,
Vulcanian food : a bier is next prepared,
On which the lifeless body should be rear'd,
Cover'd with cloth of gold, on which was laid
The corpse of Arcite, in like robes array'd,
White gloves were on his hands, and on his head
A wreath of laurel, mix'd with myrtle, spread ;
A sword keen-edged within his right he held,
The warlike emblem of the conquer'd field :

Bare was his manly visage on the bier ;
Menaced his countenance, even in death severe.
Then to the palace-hall they bore the knight,
To lie in solemn state, a public sight.
Groans, cries, and howlings fill the crowded place,
And unaffected sorrow sat on every face.
Sad Palamon above the rest appears
In sable garments, dew'd with gushing tears,
His auburn locks on either shoulder flow'd,
Which to the funeral of his friend he vow'd :
But Emily, as chief, was next his side,
A virgin-widow, and a mourning bride.
And that the princely obsequies might be
Perform'd according to his high degree,
The steed that bore him living to the fight
Was trapp'd with polish'd steel all shining bright,
And cover'd with th' achievements of the knight.
The riders rode abreast, and one his shield,
His lance of cornel-wood another held :
The third his bow ; and, glorious to behold,
The costly quiver, all of burnish'd gold.
The noblest of the Grecians next appear,
And, weeping, on their shoulders bore the bier ;
With sober pace they march'd, and often staid,
And through the master-street the corpse convey'd.
The houses to their tops with black were spread,
And e'en the pavements were with mourning hid.
The right side of the pall old Egeus kept,
And on the left the royal Theseus wept :
Each bore a golden bowl of work divine,
With honey fill'd, and milk, and mix'd with ruddy wine.

Then Palamon, the kinsman of the slain,
And after him appear'd th' illustrious train.
To grace the pomp, came Emily the bright,
With cover'd fire, the funeral pile to light.
With high devotion was the service made,
And all the rites of pagan honour paid :
So lofty was the pile, a Parthian bow,
With vigour drawn, must send the shaft below.
The bottom was full twenty fathom broad,
With crackling straw beneath in due proportion
The fabric seem'd a wood of rising green, [strow'd.
With sulphur and bitumen cast between
To feed the flames : the trees were unctuous fir,
And mountain ash, the mother of the spear ;
The mourner yew, and builder oak were there ;
The beech, the swimming alder, and the plane,
Hard box, and linden of a softer grain, [ordain.
And laurels, which the gods for conquering chiefs
How they were rank'd, shall rest untold by me,
With nameless nymphs that lived in every tree ;
Nor how the Dryads and the woodland train,
Disherited, ran howling o'er the plain :
Nor how the birds to foreign seats repair'd,
Or beasts, that bolted out, and saw the forest bared :
Nor how the ground, now clear'd, with gastly fright
Beheld the sudden sun, a stranger to the light.

The straw, as first I said, was laid below ;
Of chips and serewood was the second row ;
The third of greens, and timber newly fell'd ;
The fourth high stage the fragrant odours held,
And pearls, and precious stones, and rich array ;
In midst of which, embalm'd, the body lay.

The service sung, the maid with mourning eyes
The stubble fired ; the smouldring flames arise :
This office done, she sunk upon the ground ;
But what she spoke, recover'd from her swoon,
I want the wit in moving words to dress ;
But by themselves the tender sex may guess.
While the devouring fire was burning fast,
Rich jewels in the flame the wealthy cast ;
And some their shields, and some their lances threw,
And gave their warrior's ghost a warrior's due.
Full bowls of wine, of honey, milk, and blood,
Were pour'd upon the pile of burning wood,
And hissing flames receive, and hungry lick the food.
Then thrice the mounted squadrons ride around
The fire, and Arcite's name they thrice resound :
' Hail ! and farewell ! ' they shouted thrice amain,
Thrice facing to the left, and thrice they turn'd
again ;
Still as they turn'd, they beat their clattering shields ;
The women mix their cries ; and clamour fills the fields.
The warlike wakes continued all the night,
And funeral games were play'd at new returning light :
Who, naked, wrestled best, besmear'd with oil,
Or who with gauntlets gave or took the foil,
I will not tell you, nor would you attend ;
But briefly haste to my long story's end.
I pass the rest ; the year was fully mourn'd,
And Palamon long since to Thebes return'd ;
When, by the Grecians' general consent,
At Athens Theseus held his parliament :

Among the laws that pass'd, it was decreed,
That conquer'd Thebes from bondage should be freed :

Reserving homage to th' Athenian throne,
To which the sovereign summon'd Palamon.
Unknowing of the cause, he took his way,
Mournful in mind, and still in black array. [high,

The monarch mounts the throne, and, placed on Commands into the court the beauteous Emily :
So call'd, she came ; the senate rose, and paid
Becoming reverence to the royal maid.

And first soft whispers through th' assembly went :
With silent wonder then they watch'd th' event :
All hush'd, the king arose with awful grace,
Deep thought was in his breast, and counsel in his face.

At length he sigh'd ; and, having first prepared
Th' attentive audience, thus his will declared :

' The cause and spring of motion, from above,
Hung down on earth the golden chain of love :
Great was th' effect, and high was his intent,
When peace among the jarring seeds he sent ;
Fire, flood, and earth, and air, by this were bound,
And love, the common link, the new creation crown'd.
The chain still holds ; for though the forms decay,
Eternal matter never wears away :

The same first Mover certain bounds has placed,
How long those perishable forms shall last ;
Nor can they last beyond the time assign'd
By that all-seeing and all-making Mind :
Shorten their hours they may, for will is free,
But never pass th' appointed destiny.

So men oppress'd, when weary of their breath,
 Throw off the burden, and suborne their death.
 Then since those forms begin and have their end,
 On some unalter'd cause they sure depend :
 Parts of the whole are we ; but God the whole,
 Who gives us life and animating soul.
 For nature cannot from a part derive
 That being which the whole can only give :
 He perfect, stable : but imperfect we,
 Subject to change, and different in degree :
 Plants, beasts, and man, and, as our organs are,
 We more or less of his perfection share.
 But by a long descent, th' ethereal fire
 Corrupts ; and forms, the mortal part, expire :
 As he withdraws his virtue, so they pass,
 And the same matter makes another mass.
 'This law th' omniscient Power was pleased to give,
 That every kind should by succession live :
 That individuals die, his will ordains ;
 The propagated species still remains.
 The monarch oak, the patriarch of the trees,
 Shoots rising up, and spreads by slow degrees ;
 Three centuries he grows, and three he stays
 Supreme in state, and in three more decays ;
 So wears the paving pebble in the street,
 And towns and towers their fatal periods meet ;
 So rivers, rapid once, now naked lie, [dry.
 Forsaken of their springs, and leave their channels
 So man, at first a drop, dilates with heat,
 Then form'd, the little heart begins to beat ;
 Secret he feeds, unknowing, in the cell ;
 At length, for hatching ripe, he breaks the shell,

And struggles into breath, and cries for aid :
Then, helpless, in his mother's lap is laid ;
He creeps, he walks, and, issuing into man,
Grudges their life, from whence his own began.
Reckless of laws, affects to rule alone,
Anxious to reign, and restless on the throne :
First vegetive, then feels, and reasons last ;
Rich of three sou's, and lives all three to waste.
Some thus ; but thousands more in flower of age :
For few arrive to run the latter stage.
Sunk in the first, in battle some are slain,
And others whelm'd beneath the stormy main.
What makes all this, but Jupiter the king,
At whose command we perish and we spring ?
Then 'tis our best, since thus ordain'd to die,
To make a virtue of necessity.
Take what he gives, since to rebel is vain :
The bad grows better, which we well sustain ;
And could we choose the time, and choose aright,
'Tis best to die, our honour at the height,
When we have done our ancestors no shame,
But served our friends, and well secured our fame.
Then should we wish our happy life to close,
And leave no more for fortune to dispose :
So should we make our death a glad relief
From future shame, from sickness, and from grief :
Enjoying, while we live, the present hour,
And dying in our excellence and flower.
Then round our death-bed every friend should run,
And joy us of our conquest, early won :
While the malicious world with envious tears
Should grudge our happy end, and wish it theirs.

Since then our Arcite is with honour dead,
Why should we mourn, that he so soon is freed,
Or call untimely what the gods decreed ?
With grief as just a friend may be deplored,
From a foul prison to free air restored.
Ought he to thank his kinsman, or his wife,
Could tears recall him into wretched life !
Their sorrow hurts themselves ; on him is lost :
And worse than both, offends his happy ghost.
What then remains, but after past annoy,
To take the good vicissitude of joy ?
To thank the gracious gods for what they give ;
Possess our souls, and while we live, to live ?
Ordain we then two sorrows to combine,
And in one point th' extremes of grief to join,
That, thence resulting, joy may be renew'd,
As jarring notes in harmony conclude.
Then I propose, that Palamon should be
In marriage join'd with beauteous Emily ;
For which already I have gain'd th' assent
Of my free people in full parliament.
Long love to her has borne the faithful knight,
And well deserved, had fortune done him right :
'Tis time to mend her fault ; since Emily
By Arcite's death from former vows is free.
If you, fair sister, ratify th' accord,
And take him for your husband and your lord ;
'Tis no dishonour to confer your grace
On one descended from a royal race :
And were he less, yet years of service past,
From grateful souls exact reward at last :

Pity is heaven's and yours : nor can she find
A throne so soft as in a woman's mind.'

He said ; she blush'd ; and, as o'eraw'd by might,
Scem'd to give Theseus what she gave the knight.
Then turning to the Theban, thus he said :
' Small arguments are needful to persuade
Your temper to comply with my command ;'
And, speaking thus, he gave Emilia's hand.
Smiled Venus, to behold her own true knight
Obtain the conquest, though he lost the fight,
And bless'd with nuptial bliss the sweet laborious night.

Eros and Anteros, on either side,
One fired the bridegroom, and one warm'd the bride ;
And long-attending Hymen from above,
Shower'd on the bed the whole Idalian grove.
All of a tenor was their after life,
No day discolour'd with domestic strife ;
No jealousy, but mutual truth believed,
Secure repose, and kindness undeceived.
Thus Heaven, beyond the compass of his thought,
Sent him the blessing he so dearly bought.

So may the queen of Love long duty bless,
And all true lovers find the same success !

SIGISMONDA AND GUISCARDO.

WHILE Norman Tancred in Salerno reign'd,
The title of a gracious prince he gain'd ;
Till turn'd a tyrant in his latter days,
He lost the lustre of his former praise ;
And from the bright meridian where he stood,
Descending, dipp'd his hands in lovers' blood.

This prince, of fortune's favour long possess'd,
Yet was with one fair daughter only bless'd ;
And bless'd he might have been with her alone :
But oh ! how much more happy had he none !
She was his care, his hope, and his delight,
Most in his thought, and ever in his sight :
Next, nay, beyond his life he held her dear ;
She lived by him, and now he lived in her.
For this, when ripe for marriage, he delay'd
Her nuptial bands, and kept her long a maid ;
As envying any else should share a part
Of what was his, and claiming all her heart.
At length, as public decency required,
And all his vassals eagerly desired,
With mind averse, he rather underwent
His people's will than gave his own consent :

So was she torn, as from a lover's side,
And made, almost in his despite, a bride.

Short were her marriage joys ; for in the prime
Of youth, her lord expired before his time :
And to her father's court, in little space
Restored anew, she held a higher place ;
More loved and more exalted into grace.
This princess, fresh and young and fair and wise,
The worshipp'd idol of her father's eyes,
Did all her sex in every grace exceed,
And had more wit beside than woman need. [mind

Youth, health, and ease, and most an amorous
To second nuptials had her thoughts inclined ;
And former joys had left a secret sting behind.
But, prodigal in every other grant,
Her sire left unsupplied her only want ;
And she, betwixt her modesty and pride,
Her wishes, which she could not help, would hide.

Resolved at last to lose no longer time,
And yet to please herself without a crime,
She cast her eyes around the court, to find
A worthy subject suiting to her mind ;
To him in holy nuptials to be tied,
A seeming widow, and a secret bride.
Among the train of courtiers, one she found
With all the gifts of beauteous nature crown'd ;
Of gentle blood, but one whose niggard fate
Had set him far below her high estate ;
Guiscard his name was call'd, of blooming age,
Now squire to Tancred, and before, his page :
To him, the choice of all the shining crowd,
Her heart the noble Sigismonda vow'd.

Yet hitherto she kept her love conceal'd,
And with those graces every day beheld
The graceful youth ; and every day increased
The raging fire that burn'd within her breast ;
Some secret charm did all his acts attend,
And what his fortune wanted, hers could mend :
Till as the fire will force its outward way,
Or, in the prison pent, consume the prey,
So long her earnest eyes on him were set,
At length their twisted rays together met ;
And he, surprised, with humble joy survey'd
One sweet regard, shot by the royal maid :
Not well assured, while doubtful hopes he nursed,
A second glance came gliding like the first ;
And he, who saw the sharpness of the dart,
Without defence received it in his heart.
In public though their passion wanted speech,
Yet mutual looks interpreted for each :
Time, ways, and means of meeting were denied ;
But all those wants ingenious love supplied.
Th' inventive god, who never fails his part,
Inspires the wit, when once he warms the heart.

When Guiscard next was in the circle seen,
Where Sigismonda held the place of queen,
A hollow cane within her hand she brought,
But in the concave had enclosed a note :
With this she seem'd to play, and, as in sport,
Toss'd to her love, in presence of the court :
' Take it,' she said, ' and when your needs require,
This little brand will serve to light your fire.'
He took it with a bow, and soon divin'd
The seeming toy was not for nought design'd ;

But when retired, so long with curious eyes
He view'd the present, that he found the prize.
Much was in little writ ; and all convey'd
With cautious care, for fear to be betray'd
By some false confidant or favourite maid.
The time, the place, the manner how to meet,
Were all in punctual order plainly writ :
But since a trust must be, she thought it best
To put it out of laymen's power at least,
And for their solemn vows prepared a priest.

Guiscard (her secret purpose understood)
With joy prepared to meet the coming good ;
Nor pains nor danger was resolved to spare,
But use the means appointed by the fair.

Next the proud palace of Salerno stood
A mount of rough ascent, and thick with wood :
Through this a cave was dug with vast expense ;
The work it seem'd of some suspicious prince,
Who, when abusing power with lawless might,
From public justice would secure his flight.
The passage, made by many a winding way,
Reach'd e'en the room in which the tyrant lay.
Fit for his purpose, on a lower floor
He lodged, whose issue was an iron door,
From whence, by stairs descending to the ground,
In the blind grot a safe retreat he found.
Its outlet ended in a brake o'ergrown
With brambles, choked by time, and now unknown.
A rift there was, which from the mountain's height
Convey'd a glimmering and malignant light,
A breathing place to draw the damps away,
A twilight of an intercepted day.

The tyrant's den, whose use though lost to fame,
Was now th' apartment of the royal dame :
The cavern, only to her father known,
By him was to his darling daughter shown.

Neglected long, she let the secret rest,
Till love recall'd it to her labouring breast,
And hinted as the way by heaven design'd
The teacher, by the means he taught, to blind.
What will not women do, when need inspires
Their wit, or love their inclination fires !
'Though jealousy of state th' invention found,
Yet love refined upon the former ground ;
That way the tyrant had reserved to fly
Pursuing hate, now served to bring two lovers nigh.

The dame, who long in vain had kept the key,
Bold by desire, explored the secret way ;
Now tried the stairs, and wading through the night,
Search'd all the deep recess, and issued into light.
All this her letter had so well explain'd,
Th' instructed youth might compass what remain'd ;
The cavern-mouth alone was hard to find,
Because the path, disused, was out of mind ;
But in what quarter of the copse it lay
His eye by certain level could survey :
Yet (for the wood perplex'd with thorns he knew)
A frock of leather o'er his limbs he drew ;
And, thus provided, search'd the brake around,
Till the choked entry of the cave he found.

Thus, all prepared, the promised hour arrived,
So long expected, and so well contrived ;
With Love to friend, th' impatient lover went,
Fenced from the thorns, and trod the deep descent.

The conscious priest, who was suborn'd before,
Stood ready posted at the postern door ;
The maids in distant rooms were sent to rest,
And nothing wanted but th' invited guest.
He came, and knocking thrice, without delay,
The longing lady heard, and turn'd the key ;
At once invaded him with all her charms,
And the first step he made was in her arms :
The leathern outside, boisterous as it was,
Gave way, and bent beneath her strict embrace :
On either side the kisses flew so thick
That neither he nor she had breath to speak.
The holy man, amazed at what he saw,
Made haste to sanctify the bliss by law :
And mutter'd fast the matrimony o'er,
For fear committed sin should get before.
His work perform'd, he left the pair alone,
Because he knew he could not go too soon ;
His presence odious, when his task was done.
What thoughts he had beseems not me to say ;
Though some surmise he went to fast and pray,
And needed both, to drive the tempting thoughts away.

The foe once gone, they took their full delight ;
'Twas restless rage and tempest all the night ;
For greedy love each moment would employ,
And grudged the shortest pauses of their joy.

Thus were their loves auspiciously begun,
And thus with secret care were carried on :
The stealth itself did appetite restore,
And look'd so like sin, it pleased the more.

The cave was now become a common way,
The wicket, often open'd, knew the key :

Love rioted secure, and long enjoy'd,
Was ever eager, and was never cloy'd.

But as extremes are short, of ill and good,
And tides, at highest mark, regorge the flood ;
So fate, that could no more improve their joy,
Took a malicious pleasure to destroy.

Tancred, who fondly loved, and whose delight
Was placed in his fair daughter's daily sight ;
Of custom, when his state affairs were done,
Would pass his pleasing hours with her alone :
And, as a father's privilege allow'd,
Without attendance of th' officious crowd.

It happen'd once, that when in heat of day
He tried to sleep, as was his usual way,
The balmy slumber fled his wakeful eyes,
And forced him, in his own despite, to rise :
Of sleep forsaken, to relieve his care,
He sought the conversation of the fair :
But with her train of damsels she was gone,
In shady walks the scorching heat to shun.
He would not violate that sweet recess,
And found besides a welcome heaviness
That seized his eyes ; and slumber, which forgot,
When call'd before to come, now came unsought.
From light retired, behind his daughter's bed,
He for approaching sleep, composed his head ;
A chair was ready, for that use design'd,
So quilted that he lay at ease reclined ;
The curtains closely drawn, the light to screen,
As if he had contrived to lie unseen :
Thus cover'd with an artificial night,
Sleep did his office soon, and seal'd his sight.

With Heaven averse, in this ill omen'd hour
Was Guiscard summon'd to the secret bower,
And the fair nymph, with expectation fired,
From her attending damsels was retir'd :
For, true to love, she measured time so right
As not to miss one moment of delight.
The garden, seated on the level floor,
She left behind, and locking every door,
Thought all secure ; but little did she know,
Blind to her fate, she had enclosed her foe.
Attending Guiscard, in his leathern frock,
Stood ready, with his thrice-repeated knock :
Thrice with a doleful sound the jarring grate
Rung deaf, and hollow, and presaged their fate.
The door unlock'd, to known delight they haste,
And panting, in each other's arms embraced,
Rush to the conscious bed, a mutual freight,
And heedless press it with their wonted weight.

The sudden bound awaked the sleeping sire,
And show'd a sight no parent can desire :
His opening eyes at once with odious view
The love discover'd, and the lover knew :
He would have cried ; but hoping that he dreamt,
Amazement tied his tongue, and stopp'd th' at-
Th' ensuing moment all the truth declared ; [tempt.
But now he stood collected and prepared,
For malice and revenge had put him on his guard.

So, like a lion that unheeded lay,
Dissembling sleep, and watchful to betray,
With inward rage he meditates his prey.
The thoughtless pair, indulging their desires,
Alternate kindled, and then quench'd their fires ;

Nor thinking in the shades of death they play'd,
 Full of themselves, themselves alone survey'd,
 And, too secure, were by themselves betray'd.
 Long time dissolved in pleasure thus they lay,
 Till nature could no more suffice their play;
 Then rose the youth, and through the cave again
 Return'd; the princess mingled with her train.

Resolved his unripe vengeance to defer,
 The royal spy, when now the coast was clear,
 Sought not the garden, but retired unseen,
 To brood in secret on his gather'd spleen,
 And methodise revenge: to death he grieved;
 And, but he saw the crime, had scarce believed.
 Th' appointment for th' ensuing night he heard;
 And therefore in the cavern had prepared
 Two brawny yeomen of his trusty guard.

Scarce had unwary Guiscard set his foot
 Within the foremost entry of the grot,
 When these in secret ambush ready lay,
 And rushing on the sudden, seized the prey:
 Encumber'd with his frock, without defence,
 An easy prize, they led the prisoner thence,
 And, as commanded, brought before the prince.
 The gloomy sire, too sensible of wrong
 To vent his rage in words, restrain'd his tongue;
 And only said, 'Thus servants are preferr'd:
 And trusted, thus their sovereigns they reward.
 Had I not seen, had not these eyes received
 Too clear a proof, I could not have believed.'

He paused, and choked the rest. The youth, who saw

His forfeit life abandon'd to the law,

The judge, th' accuser, and th' offence to him
Who had both power and will t' avenge the crime,
No vain defence prepared, but thus replied :
' The faults of love by love are justified :
With unresisted might the monarch reigns,
He levels mountains, and he raises plains ;
And, not regarding difference of degree,
Abased your daughter, and exalted me.'

This bold return with seeming patience heard,
The prisoner was remitted to the guard.
The sullen tyrant slept not all the night,
But lonely walking by a winking light,
Sobb'd, wept, and groan'd, and beat his wither'd
breast,

But would not violate his daughter's rest ;
Who long expecting lay, for bliss prepared,
Listening for noise, and grieved that none she heard ;
Oft rose, and oft in vain employ'd the key,
And oft accused her lover of delay ;
And pass'd the tedious hours in anxious thoughts away.

The morrow came ; and at his usual hour
Old Tancered visited his daughter's bower ;
Her cheek (for such his custom was) he kiss'd,
Then bless'd her kneeling, and her maids dismiss'd.
The royal dignity thus far maintain'd,
Now left in private, he no longer feign'd ;
But all at once his grief and rage appear'd,
And floods of tears ran trickling down his beard.

' O Sigismonda !' he began to say :
Thrice he began, and thrice was forced to stay,
Til words, with often trying, found their way :

' I thought, O Sigismonda, (but how blind
Are parents' eyes, their children's faults to find !)
Thy virtue, birth, and breeding were above
A mean desire, and vulgar sense of love :
Nor less than sight and hearing could convince
So fond a father, and so just a prince,
Of such an unforeseen and unbeliev'd offence.
Then what indignant sorrow must I have,
To see thee lie subjected to my slave !
A man so smelling of the people's lee,
The court received him first for charity ;
And since, with no degree of honour graced,
But only suffer'd, where he first was placed :
A grovelling insect still ; and so design'd
By nature's hand, nor born of noble kind :
A thing, by neither man nor woman priz'd,
And scarcely known enough to be despis'd.
To what has Heaven reserved my age ! Ay ! why Should man, when nature calls, not choose to die,
Rather than stretch the span of life, to find
Such ills as fate has wisely cast behind,
For those to feel, whom fond desire to live
Makes covetous of more than life can give !
Each has his share of good ; and when 'tis gone,
The guest, though hungry, cannot rise too soon.
But I, expecting more, in my own wrong,
Protracting life, have lived a day too long.
If yesterday could be recall'd again,
E'en now would I conclude my happy reign :
But 'tis too late, my glorious race is run,
And a dark cloud o'ertakes my setting sun.

Hadst thou not loved, or loving, saved the shame
If not the sin, by some illustrious name;
This little comfort had relieved my mind,
'Twas frailty, not unusual to thy kind;
But thy low fall beneath thy royal blood,
Shows downward appetite to mix with mud.
Thus, not the least excuse is left for thee,
Nor the least refuge for unhappy me.

‘ For him I have resolved, whom by surprise
I took, and scarce can call it, in disguise:
For such was his attire, as with intent
Of nature, suited to his mean descent:
The harder question yet remains behind,
What pains a parent and a prince can find
To punish an offence of this degenerate kind.

‘ As I have loved, and yet I love thee more
Than ever father loved a child before;
So, that indulgence draws me to forgive;
Nature, that gave thee life, would have thee live.
But, as a public parent of the state,
My justice, and thy crime, requires thy fate.
Fain would I choose a middle course to steer;
Nature’s too kind, and justice too severe:
Speak for us both, and to the balance bring
On either side the father and the king.
Heaven knows, my heart is bent to favour thee;
Make it but scanty weight, and leave the rest to me.’

Here stopping with a sigh, he pour’d a flood
Of tears, to make his last expression good.

She, who had heard him speak, nor saw alone
The secret conduct of her love was known,

But he was taken who her soul possess'd,
Felt all the pangs of sorrow in her breast ;
And little wanted, but a woman's heart,
With cries and tears, had testified her smart ;
But inborn worth, that fortune can controul,
New strung and stiffer bent her softer soul ;
The heroine assumed the woman's place,
Confirm'd her mind, and fortified her face.
Why should she beg, or what could she pretend,
When her stern father had condemn'd her friend ?
Her life she might have had ; but her despair
Of saving his had put it past her care :
Resolved on fate, she would not lose her breath,
But rather than not die, solicit death.
Fix'd on this thought, she, not as women use,
Her fault, by common frailty, would excuse ;
But boldly justified her innocence,
But while the fact was own'd denied th' offence ;
Then, with dry eyes, and with an open look,
She met his glance midway, and thus undaunted
spoke :

‘ Tancred, I neither am disposed to make Request for life, nor offer'd life to take ;
Much less deny the deed ; but, least of all,
Beneath pretended justice weakly fall.
My words to sacred truth shall be confined,
My deeds shall show the greatness of my mind.
That I have loved, I own ; that still I love,
I call to witness all the powers above :
Yet more I own : to Guiscard's love I give
The small remaining time I have to live ;

And if beyond this life desire can be,
Not fate itself shall set my passion free,
 'This first avow'd; nor folly warp'd my mind,
Nor the frail texture of the female kind
Betray'd my virtue: for, too well I knew
What honour was, and honour had his due.
Before the holy priest my vows were tied,
So came I not a strumpet, but a bride.
This for my fame, and for the public voice:
Yet more, his merits justified my choice;
Which had they not, the first election thine,
That bond dissolved, the next is freely mine:
Or grant I err'd (which yet I must deny),
Had parents power e'en second vows to tie.
Thy little care to mend my widow'd nights
Has forced me to recourse of marriage rites
To fill an empty side, and follow known delights.
What have I done in this, deserving blame?
State laws may alter—Nature's are the same;
Those are usurp'd on helpless womankind,
Made without our consent, and wanting power to bind.

 'Thou, Tancred, better shouldst have understood,

That as thy father gave thee flesh and blood,
So gavest thou me: not from the quarry hew'd,
But of a softer mould, with sense endued;
Even softer than thy own, of suppler kind,
More exquisite of taste, and more than man refined.
Nor need'st thou by thy daughter to be told,
Though now thy sprightly blood with age be cold.

Thou hast been young : and canst remember still,
That when thou hadst the power, thou hadst the will ;

And from the past experience of thy fires,
Canst tell with what a tide our strong desires
Come rushing on in youth, and what their rage requires.

‘ And grant thy youth was exercised in arms,
When love no leisure found for softer charms ;
My tender age in luxury was train’d,
With idle ease and pageants entertain’d ;
My hours my own, my pleasures unrestrain’d :
So bred, no wonder if I took the bent
That seem’d e’en warranted by thy consent ;
For, when the father is too fondly kind,
Such seed he sows, such harvest shall he find.
Blame then thyself, as reason’s law requires
(Since nature gave, and thou foment’st my fires) ;
If still those appetites continue strong,
Thou mayst consider, I am yet but young :
Consider too, that having been a wife,
I must have tasted of a better life ;
And am not to be blamed if I renew,
By lawful means, the joys which then I knew.
Where was the crime, if pleasure I procured,
Young, and a woman, and to bliss enured ?
That was my case, and this is my defence ;
I pleased myself, I shunn’d incontinence,
And, urged by strong desires, indulged my sense,
‘ Left to myself, I must avow, I strove
From public shame to screen my secret love ;

And well acquainted with thy native pride,
Endeavour'd, what I could not help, to hide;
For which a woman's wit an easy way supplied.
How this so well contrived, so closely laid,
Was known to thee, or by what chance betray'd,
Is not my care: to please thy pride alone,
I could have wish'd it had been still unknown.

'Nor took I Guiscard by blind fancy led,
Or hasty choice, as many women wed;
But with deliberate care and ripen'd thought,
At leisure first design'd, before I wrought:
On him I rested, after long debate,
And not without considering, fix'd my fate:
His flame was equal, though by mine inspired
(For so the difference of our birth required):
Had he been born like me, like me his love
Had first begun what mine was forced to move:
But thus beginning, thus we persevere;
Our passions yet continue what they were
Nor length of trial makes our joys the less sincere.

'At this my choice, though not by thine allow'd
(Thy judgment herding with the common crowd),
Thou takest unjust offence; and, led by them,
Dost less the merit than the man esteem.
Too sharply, Tancréd, by thy pride betray'd,
Hast thou against the laws of kind inveigh'd,
(For all th' offence is in opinion placed,
Which deems high birth by lowly choice de-based !

This thought alone with fury fires thy breast
For holy marriage justifies the rest),

That I have sunk the glories of the state,
And mix'd my blood with a plebeian mate ;
In which I wonder thou shouldst oversee
Superior causes, or impute to me
The fault of fortune, or the fates' decree ;
Or call it Heaven's imperial power alone,
Which moves on springs of justice, though unknown :

Yet this we see, though order'd for the best,
The bad exalted, and the good oppress'd ;
Permitted laurels grace the lawless brow,
Th' unworthy raised, the worthy cast below.

‘ But leaving that : search we the secret springs,
And backward trace the principles of things ;
There shall we find, that when the world began,
One common mass composed the mould of man ;
One paste of flesh on all degrees bestow'd,
And kneaded up alike with moistening blood.
The same Almighty Power inspired the frame
With kindled life, and form'd the souls the same :
The faculties of intellect and will [skill ;
Dispensed with equal hand, disposed with equal
Like liberty indulged, with choice of good or ill :
Thus born alike, from virtue first began
The difference that distinguish'd man from man :
He claim'd no title from descent of blood,
But that which made him noble, made him good :
Warm'd with more particles of heavenly flame,
He wing'd his upward flight, and soar'd to fame ;
The rest remain'd below, a tribe without a name.

‘ This law, though custom now diverts the course,
As nature's institute, is yet in force,

Uncancell'd, though disused ; and he whose mind
Is virtuous, is alone of noble kind ;
Though poor in fortune, of celestial race ;
And he commits the crime who calls him base.

‘ Now lay the line, and measure all thy court,
By inward virtue, not external port ;
And find whom justly to prefer above
The man on whom my judgment placed my love :
So shalt thou see his parts and person shine,
And, thus compared, the rest a base degenerate line.
Nor took I, when I first survey'd thy court,
His valour or his virtues on report ;
But trusted what I ought to trust alone
Relying on thy eyes, and not my own :
Thy praise (and thine was then the public voice)
First recommended Guiscard to my choice.
Directed thus by thee, I look'd, and found
A man, I thought, deserving to be crown'd ;
First by my father pointed to my sight,
Nor less conspicuous by his native light ;
His mind, his mien, the features of his face,
Excelling all the rest of human race :
These were thy thoughts, and thou couldst judge aright,
'Till interest made a jaundice in thy sight.
Or should I grant, thou didst not rightly see ;
Then thou wert first deceived, and I deceived by thee.
But if thou shalt allege, through pride of mind,
Thy blood with one of base condition join'd,
'Tis false ; for 'tis not baseness to be poor ;
His poverty augments thy crime the more ;

Upbraids thy justice with the scant regard
Of worth : whom princes praise, tney should reward.
Are these the kings entrusted by the crowd
With wealth, to be dispensed for common good ?
The people sweat not for their king's delight,
T' enrich a pimp, or raise a parasite ;
Theirs is the toil ; and he who well has served
His country, has his country's wealth deserved.
E'en mighty monarchs oft are meanly born,
And kings by birth to lowest rank return ;
All subject to the power of giddy chance,
For fortune can depress or can advance :
But true nobility is of the mind,
Not given by chance, and not to chance resign'd.

‘ For the remaining doubt of thy decree,
What to resolve, and how dispose of me ;
Be warn'd to cast that useless care aside,
Myself alone will for myself provide ;
If, in thy doting and decrepit age,
Thy soul, a stranger in thy youth to rage,
Begins in cruel deeds to take delight,
Gorge with my blood thy barbarous appetite ;
For I so little am disposed to pray
For life, I would not cast a wish away.
Such as it is, th' offence is all my own ;
And what to Guiscard is already done,
Or to be done, is doom'd by thy decree,
That, if not executed first by thee,
Shall on my person be perform'd by me.

‘ Away ! with women weep, and leave me here,
Fix'd, like a man, to die without a tear ;

Or save or slay us both this present hour,
'Tis all that fate has left within thy power !'

She said : nor did her father fail to find
In all she spoke the greatness of her mind ;
Yet thought she was not obstinate to die,
Nor deem'd the death she promised was so nigh.
Secure in this belief, he left the dame,
Resolved to spare her life, and save her shame ;
But that detested object to remove,
'To wreak his vengeance, and to cure her love.

Intent on this, a secret order sign'd,
The death of Guiscard to his guards enjoin'd :
Strangling was chosen, and the night the time ;
A mute revenge, and blind as was the crime :
His faithful heart, a bloody sacrifice,
Torn from his breast, to glut the tyrant's eyes,
Closed the severe command : for, slaves to pay,
What kings decree the soldier must obey :
Waged against foes ; and when the wars are o'er,
Fit only to maintain despotic power :
Dangerous to freedom, and desired alone
By kings who seek an arbitrary throne.
Such were these guards ; as ready to have slain
The prince himself, allured with greater gain :
So was the charge perform'd with better will
By men enured to blood and exercised in ill.

Now though the sullen sire had eased his mind,
The pomp of his revenge was yet behind,
A pomp prepared to grace the present he design'd.
A goblet rich with gems, and rough with gold,
Of depth and breadth the precious pledge to hold,

With cruel care he chose : the hollow part
Enclosed, the lid conceal'd the lover's heart.
'Then of his trusted mischiefs, one he sent,
And bade him with these words the gift present :
' Thy father sends thee this, to cheer thy breast,
And glad thy sight with what thou lovest the best ;
As thou hast pleased his eyes, and joy'd his mind,
With what he loved the most of humankind.'

Ere this, the royal dame, who well had weigh'd
The consequence of what her sire had said,
Fix'd on her fate, against th' expected hour
Procured the means to have it in her power :
For this, she had distill'd, with early care,
The juice of simples, friendly to despair,
A magazine of death ; and thus prepared,
Secure to die, the fatal message heard ;
'Then smiled severe ; nor with a troubled look,
Or trembling hand, the funeral present took ;
E'en kept her countenance, when the lid, removed,
Disclosed the heart unfortunately loved.
She needed not be told within whose breast
It lodged ; the message had explain'd the rest.
Or not amazed, or hiding her surprise,
She sternly on the bearer fix'd her eyes ;
Then thus : ' Tell Tancred, on his daughter's part,
The gold, though precious, equals not the heart :
But he did well to give his best ; and I,
Who wish'd a worthier urn, forgive his poverty !'

At this she curb'd a groan, that else had come,
And, pausing, view'd the present in the tomb :
Then to the heart adored devoutly glew'd
Her lips, and raising it, her speech renew'd :

‘ E’en from my day of birth to this, the bound
Of my unhappy being, I have found
My father’s care and tenderness express’d ;
But this act of love excels the rest ;
For this so dear a present, bear him back
The best return that I can live to make.’

The messenger dispatch’d, again she view’d
The loved remains, and sighing, thus pursued :
‘ Source of my life, and lord of my desires,
In whom I lived, with whom my soul expires :
Poor heart ! no more the spring of vital heat,
Cursed be the hands that tore thee from thy seat !
The course is finish’d which thy fates decreed,
And thou from thy corporeal prison freed :
Soon hast thou reach’d the goal with mended pace,

A world of woes dispatch’d in little space :
Forced by thy worth, thy foe, in death become
Thy friend, has lodged thee in a costly tomb.
There yet remain’d thy funeral exequies,
The weeping tribute of thy widow’s eyes ;
And those, indulgent Heaven has found the way
That I before my death have leave to pay.
My father e’en in cruelty is kind,
Or heaven has turn’d the malice of his mind
To better uses than his hate design’d ;
And made th’ insult which in his gift appears
The means to mourn thee with my pious tears ;
Which I will pay thee down before I go,
And save myself the pains to weep below,
If souls can weep ; though once I meant to meet
My fate with face unmoved, and eyes unwet ;

Yet since I have thee here in narrow room,
My tears shall set thee first afloat within thy tomb :
Then (as I know thy spirit hovers nigh)
Under thy friendly conduct will I fly
To regions unexplored, secure to share
Thy state ; nor hell shall punishment appear ;
And Heaven is double heaven, if thou art there !'

She said : her brimful eyes, that ready stood,
And only wanted will to weep a flood,
Released their watery store, and pour'd amain,
Like clouds low hung, a sober shower of rain ;
Mute solemn sorrow, free from female noise,
Such as the majesty of grief destroys :
For, bending o'er the cup, the tears she shed
Seem'd by the posture to discharge her head,
O'erfill'd before ; and oft (her mouth applied
To the cold heart) she kiss'd at once, and cried.
Her maids, who stood amazed, nor knew the cause
Of her complaining, nor whose heart it was,
Yet all due measures of her mourning kept,
Did office at the dirge, and by infection wept ;
And oft inquired th' occasion of her grief
(Unanswer'd but by sighs), and offer'd vain relief.
At length, her stock of tears already shed,
She wiped her eyes, she raised her drooping head,
And thus pursued : ' O ever faithful heart !
I have perform'd the ceremonial part,
The decencies of grief : it rests behind,
That as our bodies were, our souls be join'd :
To thy whate'er abode, my shade convey,
And as an elder ghost, direct the way.'

She said ; and bade the vial to be brought,
Where she before had brew'd the deadly draught :
First pouring out the medicinable bane,
The heart, her tears had rinsed, she bathed again ;
Then down her throat the death securely throws,
And quaffs a long oblivion of her woes.

This done she mounts the genial bed, and there
(Her body first composed with honest care)
Attends the welcome rest : her hands yet hold,
Close to her heart, the monumental gold ;
Nor further word she spoke, but closed her sight,
And, quiet, sought the covert of the night.

The damsels, who the while in silence mourn'd,
Not knowing, nor suspecting death suborn'd ;
Yet, as their duty was, to Tancred sent,
Who, conscious of th' occasion, fear'd th' event,
Alarm'd, and with presaging heart he came,
And drew the curtains, and exposed the dame
To loathsome light : then, with a late relief,
Made vain efforts to mitigate her grief,
She, what she could, excluding day, her eyes
Kept firmly seal'd, and sternly thus replies :

‘ Tancred ! restrain thy tears, unsought by me,
And sorrow, unavailing now to thee :
Did ever man before afflict his mind,
To see th' effect of what himself design'd ?
Yet if thou hast remaining in thy heart
Some sense of love, some unextinguish'd part
Of former kindness, largely once profess'd,
Let me by that adjure thy harden'd breast,
Not to deny thy daughter's last request.

The secret love, which I so long enjoy'd,
And still conceal'd to gratify thy pride,
Thou hast disjoin'd ; but, with my dying breath,
Seek not, I beg thee, to disjoin our death ;
Where'er his corpse by thy command is laid,
Thither let mine in public be convey'd ;
Exposed in open view, and side by side,
Acknowledged as a bridegroom and a bride.'

The prince's anguish hinder'd his reply :
And she, who felt her fate approaching nigh,
Seized the cold heart, and heaving to her breast,
' Here, precious pledge (she said), securely rest !'
These accents were her last ; the creeping death
Benumb'd her senses first, then stopp'd her breath.

Thus she for disobedience justly died ;
The sire was justly punished for his pride :
The youth, least guilty, suffer'd for th' offence
Of duty violated to his prince :
Who, late repenting of his cruel deed,
One common sepulchre for both decreed ;
Entomb'd the wretched pair in royal state,
And on their monument inscribed their fate.

THE COCK AND THE FOX :

OR,

THE TALE OF THE NUN'S PRIEST.

THERE lived, as author's tell, in days of yore,
A widow somewhat old, and very poor :
Deep in a dell her cottage lonely stood,
Well thatch'd, and under covert of a wood.

This dowager, on whom my tale I found,
Since last she laid her husband in the ground,
A simple sober life in patience led,
And had but just enough to buy her bread :
But housewifing the little Heaven had lent,
She duly paid a groat for quarter-rent ;
And pinch'd her belly with her daughters two,
To bring the year about with much ado.

The cattle in her homestead were three sows,
A ewe call'd Mally, and three brinded cows.
Her parlour-window stuck with herbs around,
Of savoury smell ; and rushes strew'd the ground.
A maple-dresser in her hall she had,
On which full many a slender meal she made,

For no delicious morsel pass'd her throat ;
According to her cloth she cut her coat :
No poignant sauce she knew, nor costly treat,
Her hunger gave a relish to her meat :
A sparing diet did her health assure ;
Or sick, a pepper-posset was her cure.
Before the day was done, her work she sped,
And never went by candlelight to bed :
With exercise she sweat ill humours out,
Her dancing was not hinder'd by the gout.
Her poverty was glad ; her heart content ;
Nor knew she what the spleen or vapours meant.

Of wine she never tasted through the year,
But white and black was all her homely cheer ;
Brown bread, and milk (but first she skimm'd her
And rashers of singed bacon on the coals. [bowls),
On holidays, an egg, or two at most ;
But her ambition never reach'd to roast.

A yard she had with pales enclosed about,
Some high, some low, and a dry ditch without.
Within this homestead lived, without a peer,
For crowing loud, the noble Chanticleer :
So hight her cock, whose singing did surpass
The merry notes of organs at the mass.
More certain was the crowing of a cock
To number hours than is an abbey clock :
And sooner than the matin-bell was rung,
He clapp'd his wings upon his roost, and sung :
For when degrees fifteen ascended right,
By sure instinct he knew 'twas one at night.
High was his comb, and coral-red withal,
In dents, embattled like a castle wall :

His bill was raven-black, and shone like jet ;
Blue were his legs, and orient were his feet ;
White were his nails, like silver to behold,
His body glittering like the burnish'd gold.

This gentle cock, for solace of his life,
Six misses had, beside his lawful wife ;
Scandal, that spares no king, though ne'er so good,
Says, they were all of his own flesh and blood ;
His sisters both by sire and mother's side,
And sure their likeness show'd them near allied.
But make the worst, the monarch did no more
Than all the Ptolemies had done before :
When incest is for interest of nation,
'Tis made no sin by holy dispensation.
Some lines have been maintain'd by this alone,
Which by their common ugliness are known.

But passing this, as from our tale apart,
Dame Partlet was the sovereign of his heart :
Ardent in love, outrageous in his play,
He feather'd her a hundred times a day ;
And she, that was not only passing fair,
But was withal discreet and debonair,
Resolved the passive doctrine to fulfil,
Though loath, and let him work his wicked will.
At board and bed was affable and kind,
According as their marriage vow did bind,
And as the church's precept had enjoin'd.
E'en since she was a se'nnight old, they say,
Was chaste and humble to her dying day ;
Nor, chick nor hen, was known to disobey.

By this her husband's heart she did obtain ;
What cannot beauty, join'd with virtue, gain !

She was his only joy, and he her pride,
She, when she walk'd, went pecking by his side ;
If, spurning on the ground, he sprung a corn,
The tribute in his bill to her was borne.
But oh ! what joy it was to hear him sing
In summer, when the day began to spring ;
Stretching his neck, and warbling in his throat
Solus cum solâ, then was all his note.
For, in the days of yore, the birds of parts
Were bred to speak, and sing, and learn the liberal arts.

It happ'd, that, perching on the parlour-beam
Amidst his wives, he had a deadly dream,
Just at the dawn ; and sigh'd, and groan'd so fast,

As every breath he drew would be his last.
Dame Partlet, ever nearest to his side,
Heard all his piteous moan, and how he cried
For help from gods and men : and sore aghast
She peck'd and pull'd, and waken'd him at last.
' Dear heart,' said she, ' for love of heaven, declare
Your pain, and make me partner of your care.
You groan, sir, ever since the morning light,
As something had disturb'd your noble spright.'

' And, madam, well I might,' said Chanticleer,
' Never was Shrovetide cock in such a fear.
Even still I run all over in a sweat,
My princely senses not recover'd yet.
For such a dream I had of dire portent,
That much I fear my body will be shent ;
It bodes I shall have wars and woful strife,
Or in a loathsome dungeon end my life.

Know, dame, I dream'd within my troubled breast,
That in our yard I saw a murderous beast,
That on my body would have made arrest.
With waking eyes I ne'er beheld his fellow,
His colour was betwixt a red and yellow,
Tipp'd was his tail, and both his pricking ears,
With black, and much unlike his other hairs :
The rest, in shape a beagle's whelp throughout,
With broader forehead, and a sharper snout :
Deep in his front were sunk his glowing eyes ;
That yet methinks I see him with surprise.
Reach out your hand, I drop with clammy sweat,
And lay it to my heart, and feel it beat.' [above,

' Now, fie, for shame !' quoth she, ' by heaven
Thou hast for ever lost thy lady's love ;
No woman can endure a recreant knight,
He must be bold by day, and free by night.
Our sex desires a husband, or a friend,
Who can our honour and his own defend ;
Wise, hardy, secret, liberal of his purse :
A fool is nauseous, but a coward worse :
No bragging coxcomb, yet no baffled knight.
How darest thou talk of love, and darest not fight ?
How darest thou tell thy dame thou art afeard ?
Hast thou no manly heart, and hast a beard ?

' If aught from fearful dreams may be divined,
They signify a cock of dunghill kind.
All dreams, as in old Galen I have read,
Are from repletion and complexion bred ;
From rising fumes of indigested food,
And noxious humours that infect the blood

And sure, my lord, if I can read aright,
These foolish fancies you have had to-night
Are certain symptoms (in the canting style)
Of boiling choler, and abounding bile :
This yellow gall that in your stomach floats
Engenders all these visionary thoughts.
When choler overflows, then dreams are bred
Of flames, and all the family of red ;
Red dragons and red beasts in sleep we view ;
For humours are distinguish'd by their hue.
From hence we dream of wars and warlike things,
And wasps and hornets with their double stings.
Choler adust congeals our blood with fear ;
'Then black bulls toss us, and black devils tear.
In sanguine airy dreams aloft we bound,
With rheums oppress'd we sink in rivers drown'd.
' More I could say, but thus conclude my theme :
The dominating humour makes the dream.
Cato was in his time accounted wise,
And he condemns them all for empty lies.
Take my advice, and when we fly to ground,
With laxatives preserve your body sound,
And purge the peccant humours that abound.
I should be loath to lay you on a bier ;
And though there lives no 'pothecary near,
I dare for once prescribe for your disease,
And save long bills, and a damn'd doctor's fees.
' Two sovereign herbs, which I by practice know,
And both at hand, for in our yard they grow,
On peril of my soul shall rid you wholly
Of yellow choler, and of melancholy :

You must both purge and vomit ; but obey,
And for the love of heaven make no delay.
Since hot and dry in your complexion join,
Beware the sun when in a vernal sign ;
For when he mounts exalted in the ram,
If then he finds your body in a flame,
Replete with choler, I dare lay a groat,
A tertian ague is at least your lot :
Perhaps a fever (which the gods forbend !)
May bring your youth to some untimely end.
And therefore, sir, as you desire to live,
A day or two before your laxative,
Take just three worms, nor under nor above,
Because the gods unequal numbers love.
These digestives prepare you for your purge,
Of fumatory, centaury, and spurge,
And of ground ivy add a leaf or two,
All which within our yard or garden grow :
Eat these, and be, my lord, of better cheer :
Your father's son was never born to fear.'

' Madam,' quoth he, ' gramercy for your care ;
But Cato, whom you quoted, you may spare.
'Tis true, a wise and worthy man he seems,
And (as you say) gave no belief to dreams :
But other men of more authority,
And, by th' immortal powers ! as wise as he,
Maintain, with sounder sense, that dreams forbode ;
For Homer plainly says they come from God
Nor Cato said it : but some modern fool
Imposed in Cato's name on boys at school.

' Believe me, madam, morning dreams foreshow
Th' events of things, and future weal or woe :

Some truths are not by reason to be tried,
But we have sure experience for our guide.
An ancient author *, equal with the best,
Relates this tale of dreams among the rest :—

‘ Two friends, or brothers, with devout intent,
On some far pilgrimage together went.
It happen’d so that when the sun was down,
They just arrived by twilight at a town ;
That day had been the baiting of a bull,
’Twas at a feast, and every inn so full,
That no void room in chamber, or on ground,
And but one sorry bed was to be found ;
And that so little it would hold but one,
Though till this hour they never lay alone.

‘ So were they forced to part ; one stay’d behind,
His fellow sought what lodging he could find :
At last he found a stall where oxen stood,
And that he rather chose than lie abroad.
’Twas in a further yard without a door,
But, for his ease, well litter’d was the floor.

‘ His fellow, who the narrow bed had kept,
Was weary, and without a rocker slept :
Supine he snored ; but, in the dead of night,
He dream’d his friend appear’d before his sight,
Who, with a ghastly look and doleful cry,
Said, “ Help me, brother, or this night I die
Arise, and help, before all help be vain,
Or in an ox’s stall I shall be slain !”

‘ Roused from his rest, he waken’d in a start,
Shivering with horror, and with aching heart ;

* Cicero : in his treatise De Divinatione.

At length to cure himself by reason tries :

'Twas but a dream, and what are dreams but lies !

So thinking, changed his side, and closed his eyes.

His dream returns ; his friend appears again,

“ The murderers come : now help, or I am slain ! ”

'Twas but a vision still, and visions are but vain.

He dream'd the third ; but now his friend appear'd

Pale, naked, pierced with wounds, with blood besmear'd :

“ Thrice warn'd, awake ! ” said he, “ relief is late,

The deed is done ; but thou revenge my fate !

Tardy of aid, unseal thy heavy eyes.

Awake, and with the dawning day arise :

Take to the western gate thy ready way,

For by that passage they my corpse convey :

My corpse is in a tumbril laid, among

The filth and ordure, and enclosed with dung.

That cart arrest, and raise a common cry :

For sacred hunger of my gold I die ! ”

Then show'd his grisly wound ; and last he drew

A piteous sigh ; and took a long adieu !

‘ The frightened friend arose by break of day,

And found the stall where late his fellow lay.

Then of his inapious host inquiring more,

Was answer'd that his guest was gone before :

“ Muttering he went,” said he, “ by morning light,

And much complain'd of his ill rest by night.”

This raised suspicion in the pilgrim's mind ;

Because all hosts are of an evil kind,

And oft, to share the spoil, with robbers join'd.

‘ His dream confirm'd his thought : with troubled
Straight to the western gate his way he took ; [look

‘For priests,’ he said, ‘are patterns for the rest
 (The gold of Heaven, who bear the God impress’d):
 But when the precious coin is kept unclean,
 The Sovereign’s image is no longer seen.
 If they be foul, on whom the people trust,
 Well may the baser brass contract a rust.’

The prelate for his holy life he prized;
 The worldly pomp of prelacy despised.
 His Saviour came not with a gaudy show
 Nor was his kingdom of the world below.
 Patience in want, and poverty of mind,
 These marks of church and churchmen he design’d,
 And living taught, and dying left behind.
 The crown he wore was of the pointed thorn;
 In purple he was crucified, not born.
 They who contend for place and high degree,
 Are not his sons, but those of Zebedee.

Not but he knew the signs of earthly power
 Might well become Saint Peter’s successor:
 The holy father holds a double reign; [plain.
 The prince may keep his pomp—the fisher must be

Such was the saint, who shone with every grace,
 Reflecting, Moseslike, his Maker’s face.
 God saw his image lively was express’d,
 And his own work, as in creation, bless’d.

The tempter saw him too with envious eye,
 And, as on Job, demanded leave to try.
 He took the time when Richard was deposed,
 And high and low with happy Harry closed.
 This prince, though great in arms, the priest withstood;
 Near though he was, yet not the next of blood:

Of two young merchants, whom the hope of gain
Induced in partnership to cross the main :
Waiting till willing winds their sails supplied,
Within a trading-town they long abide,
Full fairly situate on a haven's side.

' One evening it befell, that looking out,
The wind they long had wish'd was come about.
Well pleased they went to rest, and, if the gale
Till morn continued, both resolved to sail.

But as together in a bed they lay,
The younger had a dream at break of day.
A man, he thought, stood frowning at his side,
Who warn'd him for his safety to provide,
Nor put to sea, but safe on shore abide.

" I come, thy genius, to command thy stay ;
Trust not the winds, for fatal is the day,
And death, unhop'd, attends the watery way."

' The vision said, and vanish'd from his sight :
The dreamer waken'd in a mortal fright ;
Then pull'd his drowꝑ neighbour, and declared
What in his slumber he had seen and heard.
His friend smiled scornful, and with proud contempt
Rejects as idle what his fellow dreamt :

" Stay, who will stay : for me no fears restrain,
Who follow Mercury, the god of gain :
Let each man do as to his fancy seems,
I wait, not I, till you have better dreams.
Dreams are but interludes, which fancy makes ,
When monarch Reason sleeps, this mimic wakes :
Compounds a medley of disjointed things :
A mob of cobblers, and a court of kings :

Light fumes are merry, grosser fumes are sad ;
Both are the reasonable soul run mad :
And many monstrous forms in sleep we see,
That neither were, nor are, nor e'er can be.
Sometimes forgotten things long cast behind
Rush forward in the brain, and come to mind ;
The nurse's legends are for truths received,
And the man dreams but what the boy believed.
Sometimes we but rehearse a former play,
The night restores our actions done by day ;
As hounds in sleep will open for their prey.
In short, the farce of dreams is of a piece,
Chimeras all, and more absurd, or less :
You, who believe in tales, abide alone ;
Whate'er I get, this voyage, is my own."

' Thus while he spoke, he heard the shouting crew
That call'd aboard, and took his last adieu !
The vessel went before a merry gale,
And for quick passage put on every sail :
But when least fear'd, and e'en in open day,
The mischief overtook her in the way :
Whether she sprung a leak, I cannot find,
Or whether she was overset with wind,
Or that some rock below her bottom rent ;
But down at once with all her crew she went :
Her fellow ships from far her loss descried ;
But only she was sunk, and all were safe beside.

' By this example you are taught again,
That dreams and visions are not always vain.
But if, dear Partlet, you are yet in doubt,
Another tale shall make the former out.

‘ Kenelm, the son of Kenulph, Mercia’s king,
Whose holy life the legends loudly sing*,
Warn’d in a dream, his murder did foretell,
From point to point, as after it befell :
All circumstances to his nurse he told
(A wonder, from a child of seven years old) :
The dream with horror heard, the good old wife
From treason counsel’d him to guard his life ;
But close to keep the secret in his mind,
For a boy’s vision small belief would find.
The pious child, by promise bound, obey’d ;
Nor was the fatal murder long delay’d :
By Quenda slain, he fell before his time,
Made a young martyr by his sister’s crime.
The tale is told by venerable Bede,
Which, at your better leisure, you may read.

‘ Macrobius, too, relates the vision sent
To the great Scipio, with the famed event,
Objection makes, but after makes replies,
And adds, that dreams are often prophecies.

‘ Of Daniel, you may read in holy writ,
Who, when the king his vision did forget,
Could word for word the wondrous dream repeat ;
Nor less of patriarch Joseph understand,
Who by a dream enslaved th’ Egyptian land ;
The years of plenty and of dearth foretold,
When, for their bread, their liberty they sold.
Nor must th’ exalted butler be forgot ;
Nor he whose dream presaged his hanging lot.

* The legends record him as a martyr. He was murdered by his sister Quendreda, when only seven years old.

‘ And did not Cræsus the same death foresee,
 Raised in a vision on a lofty tree ?
 The wife of Hector, in his utmost pride,
 Dream’d of his death the night before he died :
 Well was he warn’d from battle to refrain.
 But men to death decreed are warn’d in vain :
 He dared the dream, and by his fatal foe was slain.

‘ Much more I know, which I forbear to speak .
 For see, the ruddy day begins to break :
 Let this suffice, that plainly I foresee
 My dream was bad, and bodes adversity :
 But neither pills nor laxatives I like,
 They only serve to make a well man sick :
 Of these his gain the sharp physician makes,
 And often gives a purge, but seldom takes :
 They not correct, but poison all the blood,
 And ne’er did any but the doctors good.
 Their tribe, trade, trinkets, I defy them all.
 With every work of ‘Pothecary’s Hali.

‘ These melancholy matters I forbear :
 But let me tell thee, Partlet mine, and swear,
 That when I view the beauties of thy face,
 I fear not death, nor dangers, nor disgrace :
 So may my soul have bliss, as when I saw
 The scarlet red about thy partridge eye,
 While thou art constant to thy own true knight,
 While thou art mine, and I am thy delight,
 All sorrows at thy presence take their flight.
 For true it is, as in principio,
Mulier est homines confusio.
 Madam, the meaning of this Latin is,
 That woman is to man his sovereign bliss.

For when by night I feel your tender side,
Though for the narrow perch I cannot ride,
Yet I have such a solace in my mind,
That all my boding cares are cast behind ;
And even already I forget my dream : '—
He said, and downward flew from off the beam.
For daylight now began apace to spring,
The thrush to whistle, and the lark to sing.
Then crowing, clapp'd his wings ; th' appointed call

To chuck his wives together in the hall.

By this the widow had unbarr'd the door,
And Chanticleer went strutting out before,
With royal courage, and with heart so light,
As show'd he scorn'd the visions of the night.
Now roaming in the yard he spurn'd the ground,
And gave to Partlet the first grain he found.
Then often feather'd her with wanton play,
And trod her twenty times ere prime of day ;
And took by turns and gave so much delight,
Her sisters pined with envy at the sight.

He chuck'd again, when other corns he found,
And scarcely deign'd to set a foot to ground ;
But swagger'd like a lord about his hall,
And his seven wives came running at his call.

'Twas now the month in which the world began
(If March beheld the first created man) :
And since the vernal equinox, the sun,
In Aries, twelve degrees, or more, had run ;
When casting up his eyes against the light,
Both month and day and hour he measured right,

And told more truly than th' ephemeris ;
For art may err, but nature cannot miss.

Thus numbering times and seasons in his breast,
His second crowing the third hour confess'd :
Thus turning, said to Partlet, ' See, my dear,
How lavish nature has adorn'd the year ;
How the pale primrose and blue violet spring,
And birds essay their throats, disused to sing :
All these are ours ; and I with pleasure see
Man strutting on two legs, and aping me !
An unfledged creature, of a lumpish frame,
Endued with fewer particles of flame :
Our dame sits cowering o'er a kitchen fire,
I draw fresh air, and Nature's works admire :
And, even this day, in more delight abound
Than since I was an egg I ever found.'

'The time shall come when Chanticleer shall wish
His words unsaid, and hate his boasted bliss :
The crested bird shall by experience know,
'ove made not him his masterpiece below ;
And learn the latter end of joy is woe.
The vessel of his bliss to dregs is run,
And heaven will have him taste his other tun.

Ye wise, draw near, and hearken to my tale,
Which proves that oft the proud by flattery fail :
The legend is as true I undertake
As Tristran is, and Launcelot of the Lake :
Which all our ladies in such reverence hold,
As if in book of martyrs it were told.

A fox full fraught with seeming sanctity,
That fear'd an oath, but like the devil would lie ;

Who look'd like Lent, and had the holy leer,
And durst not sin before he said his prayer ;
This pious cheat, that never suck'd the blood,
Nor chew'd the flesh of lambs, but when he could ;
Had pass'd three summers in the neighbouring
wood :

And musing long whom next to circumvent,
On Chanticleer his wicked fancy bent :
And in his high imagination cast
By stratagem to gratify his taste.

The plot contrived, before the break of day,
Saint Reynard through the hedge had made his
way :

The pale was next, but proudly with a bound
He leap'd the fence of the forbidden ground :
Yet, fearing to be seen, within a bed
Of coleworts he conceal'd his wily head ;
There skulk'd till afternoon, and watch'd his time
(As murderers use) to perpetrate his crime
O hypocrite ! ingenious to destroy ;
O traitor, worse than Sinon was to Troy !
O vile subverter of the Gallic reign,
More false than Gano was to Charlemagne !
O Chanticleer, in an unhappy hour
Didst thou forsake the safety of thy bower !
Better for thee thou hadst believed thy dream,
And not that day descended from the beam !

But here the doctors eagerly dispute :
Some hold predestination absolute :
Some clerks maintain, that Heaven at first foresees,
And in the virtue of foresight decrees.

If this be so, then prescience binds the will,
And mortals are not free to good or ill :
For what he first foresaw, he must ordain,
Or his eternal prescience may be vain :
As bad for us as prescience had not been :
For first or last he's author of the sin.
And who says that, let the blaspheming man
Say worse even of the devil, if he can.
For how can that Eternal Power be just
To punish man, who sins because he must ?
Or how can he reward a virtuous deed,
Which is not done by us, but first decreed ?

I cannot bolt this matter to the bran,
As Bradwardin * and holy Austin can :
If prescience can determine actions so
That we must do, because he did foreknow ;
Or that foreknowing, yet our choice is free,
Not forced to sin by strict necessity :
This strict necessity they simple call,
Another sort there is conditional.
The first so binds the will, that things foreknown,
By spontaneity, not choice, are done.
Thus galley-slaves tug willing at their oar,
Consent to work, in prospect of the shore :
But would not work at all, if not constrain'd before.
That other does not liberty constrain,
But man may either act or may refrain.

* Thomas Bradwardin was elected Archbishop of Canterbury in 1348. He had the character of a great philosopher and mathematician, and was so eminent a divine as to be called Doctor Profundus. Austin, or Augustine, was the first Archbishop of Canterbury.

Heaven made us agents free to good or ill,
And forced it not, though he foresaw the will.
Freedom was first bestow'd on human race,
And prescience only held the second place.

If he could make such agents wholly free.
I not dispute; the point's too high for me:
For Heaven's unfathom'd power what man can
sound,

Or put to his Omnipotence a bound?
He made us to his image, all agree;
That image is the soul, and that must be
Or not the Maker's image, or be free.

But whether it were better man had been
By nature bound to good, not free to sin,
I waive, for fear of splitting on a rock.
The tale I tell is only of a cock;
Who had not run the hazard of his life,
Had he believed his dream, and not his wife:
For women, with a mischief to their kind,
Pervert, with bad advice, our better mind.
A woman's counsel brought us first to woe,
And made her man his Paradise forego,
Where at heart's ease he lived; and might have been
As free from sorrow as he was from sin.
For what the devil had their sex to do,
That, born to folly, they presumed to know,
And could not see the serpent in the grass?
But I myself presume, and let it pass.

'Silence in times of suffering is the best,
'Tis dangerous to disturb a hornet's nest.
In other authors you may find enough,
But all they say of dames is idle stuff, —

Legends of lying wits together bound,
The wife of Bath would throw them to the ground.'
These are the words of Chanticleer, not mine,
I honour dames, and think their sex divine.

Now to continue what my tale began :
Lay madam Partlet basking in the sun,
Breast high in sand : her sisters in a row,
Enjoy'd the beams above, the warmth below.
The cock, that of his flesh was ever free,
Sung merrier than the mermaid in the sea :
And so befell that, as he cast his eye
Among the coleworts on a butterfly,
He saw false Reynard, where he lay full low,
I need not swear he had no list to crow :
But cried, ' Cock, cock !' and gave a sudden start.
As sore dismay'd and frighten'd at his heart.
For birds and beasts, inform'd by nature, know
Kinds opposite to theirs, and fly their foe :
No Chanticleer, who never saw a fox,
Yet shunn'd him as a sailor shuns the rocks.

But the false loon, who could not work his will
By open force, employ'd his flattering skill ;
' I hope, my lord,' said he, ' I not offend ;
Are you afraid of me, that am your friend ?
I were a beast indeed to do you wrong,
I, who have loved and honour'd you so long :
Stay, gentle sir, nor take a false alarm,
For, on my soul, I never meant you harm.
I come no spy, nor as a traitor press
To learn the secrets of your soft recess :
Far be from Reynard so profane a thought,
But by the sweetness of your voice was brought :

For, as I bid my beads, by chance I heard
The song as of an angel in the yard :
A song that would have charm'd th' infernal gods,
And banish'd horror from the dark abodes :
Had Orpheus sung it in the nether sphere,
So much the hymn had pleased the tyrant's ear,
The wife had been detain'd, to keep the husband there.

' My lord, your sire familiarly I knew,
A peer deserving such a son as you :
He, with your lady-mother (whom Heaven rest !)
Has often graced my house, and been my guest.
To view his living features does me good,
For I am your poor neighbour in the wood ;
And in my cottage should be proud to see
The worthy heir of my friend's family.

' But since I speak of singing, let me say,
As with an upright heart I safely may,
What, save yourself, there breathes not on the ground,

One like your father for a silver sound.
So sweetly would he wake the winter day
That matrons to the church mistook their way,
And thought they heard the merry organ play.
And he, to raise his voice with artful care,
(What will not beaux attempt to please the fair ?)
On tiptoe stood to sing with greater strength,
And stretch'd his comely neck at all the length :
And while he strain'd his voice to pierce the skies,
As saints in rapture use, would shut his eyes,
That the sound striving through the narrow throat,
His winking might avail, to mend the note.

By this, in song, he never had his peer,
 From sweet Cecilia down to Chanticleer ;
 Not Maro's muse who sung " the mighty man,"
 Nor Pindar's heavenly lyre, nor Horace when a swan.

Your ancestors proceed from race divine,
 From Brennus and Belinus is your line,
 Who gave to sovereign Rome such loud alarms
 That e'en the priests were not excused from arms.

' Besides, a famous monk* of modern times,
 Has left of cocks recorded in his rhymes,
 That of a parish priest the son and heir
 (When sons of priests were from the proverb clear),
 Affronted once a cock of noble kind,
 And either lamed his legs or struck him blind ;
 For which the clerk his father was disgraced,
 And in his benefice another placed.
 Now sing, my lord, if not for love of me,
 Yet for the sake of sweet saint Charity ;
 Make hills and dales, and earth and heaven rejoice,
 And emulate your father's angel voice.'

The cock was pleased to hear him speak so fair,
 And proud beside, as solar people are :
 Nor could the treason from the truth descry,
 So was he ravish'd with this flattery :
 So much the more, as, from a little elf,
 He had a high opinion of himself :
 Though sickly, slender, and not large of limb ;
 Concluding all the world was made for him.

Ye princes raised by poets to the gods,
 And Alexander'd up in lying odes,

* Nigelius Wireker, in Speculum Stultorum.

Believe not every flattering knave's report,
There's many a Reynard lurking in the court ;
And he shall be received with more regard,
And listen'd to, than modest truth is heard.

This Chanticleer, of whom the story sings,
Stood high upon his toes, and clapp'd his wings ;
Then stretch'd his neck, and wink'd with both his Ambitious, as he sought th' Olympic prize. [eyes,
But while he pain'd himself to raise his note,
False Reynard rush'd, and caught him by the throat :
Then on his back he laid the precious load,
And sought his wonted shelter of the wood ;
Swiftly he made his way, the mischief done,
Of all unheeded, and pursued by none.

Alas ! what stay is there in human state,
Or who can shun inevitable fate ?
The doom was written, the decree was pass'd,
Ere the foundations of the world were cast !
In Aries though the sun exalted stood,
His patron planet to procure his good ;
Yet Saturn was his mortal foe, and he
In Libra raised, opposed the same degree :
The rays both good and bad, of equal power,
Each thwarting other, made a mingled hour.

On Friday morn he dream'd this direful dream,
Cross to the worthy native, in his scheme ;
Ah blissful Venus, goddess of delight,
How couldst thou suffer thy devoted knight,
On thy own day to fall by foe oppress'd,
The wight of all the world who served thee best ?
Who, true to love, was all for recreation,
And minded not the work of propagation,

Gaufride*, who couldst so well in rhyme complain
The death of Richard, with an arrow slain,
Why had not I thy muse, or thou my heart,
To sing this heavy dirge with equal art !
That I like thee of Friday might complain ;
For on that day was Cœur de Lion slain.

Not louder cries, when Ilium was in flames,
Were sent to heaven by woful Trojan dames,
When Pyrrhus toss'd on high his burnish'd blade.
And offer'd Priam to his father's shade,
Than for the cock the widow'd poultry made.
Fair Partlet first, when he was borne from sight,
With sovereign shrieks bewail'd her captive knight,
For louder than the Carthaginian wife,
When Asdrubal, her husband, lost his life ;
When she beheld the smouldering flames ascend.
And all the Punic glories at an end :
Willing into the fires she plunged her head,
With greater ease than others seek their bed.
Not more aghast the matrons of renown,
When tyrant Nero burn'd th' imperial town,
Shriek'd for the downfall in a doleful cry,
For which their guiltless lords were doom'd to die.

Now to my story I return again :
The trembling widow, and her daughters twain,
This woful cackling cry with horror heard,
Of these distracted damsels in the yard ;
And starting up beheld the heavy sight,
How Reynard to the forest took his flight,
And cross his back, as in triumphant scorn,
The hope and pillar of the house was borne.

* Or Geoffrey de Vinsauf, a Norman historian.

‘ The fox, the wicked fox ! ’ was all the cry ;
Out from his house ran every neighbour nigh :
The vicar first, and after him the crew,
With forks and staves the felon to pursue.
Ran Coll our dog, and Talbot with the band,
And Malkin, with her distaff in her hand :
Ran cow and calf, and family of hogs,
In panic horror of pursuing dogs,
With many a deadly grunt and doleful squeak,
Poor swine ! as if their pretty hearts would break.
The shouts of men, the women in dismay,
With shrieks augment the terror of the day.
The ducks that heard the proclamation cried,
And fear’d a persecution might betide,
Full twenty miles from town their voyage take,
Obscure in rushes of the liquid lake.
The geese fly o’er the barn ; the bees in arms
Drive headlong from the waxen cells in swarms.
Jack Straw, at London-stone, with all his rout,
Struck not the city with so loud a shout :
Not when with English hate they did pursue
A Frenchman, or an unbelieving Jew :
Not when the welkin rung with ‘ one and all ; ’
And echoes bounded back from Fox’s hall ;
Earth seem’d to sink beneath, and heaven above to fall !
With might and main they chased the murderous
With brazen trumpets, and inflated box, [fox,
To kindle Mars with military sounds ;
Nor wanted horns t’ inspire sagacious hounds.
But see how fortune can confound the wise,
And, when they least expect it turn the dice.

The captive cock, who scarce could draw his breath,
And lay within the very jaws of death ;
Yet in his agony this fancy wrought,
And fear supplied him with this happy thought :
' Yours is the prize, victorious prince !' said he,
' The vicar my defeat, and all the village see.
Enjoy your friendly fortune while you may,
And bid the churls, that envy you the prey,
Call back their mungrel curs, and cease their cry ;
See, fools, the shelter of the wood is nigh,
And Chanticleer in your despite shall die :
He shall be plucked and eaten to the bone.'
' 'Tis well advised ; in faith it shall be done !'
Thus Reynard said : but, as the word he spoke,
The prisoner with a spring from prison broke :
Then stretch'd his feather'd fans with all his might,
And to the neighbouring maple wing'd his flight.
Whom when the traitor safe on tree beheld,
He cursed the gods, with shame and sorrow fill'd ;
Shame for his folly, sorrow out of time,
For plotting an unprofitable crime :
Yet mastering both, th' artificer of lies
Renews th' assault, and his last battery tries.
' Though I,' said he, ' did ne'er in thought offend,
How justly may my lord suspect his friend !
Th' appearance is against me, I confess,
Who seemingly have put you in distress :
You, if your goodness does not plead my cause,
May think I broke all hospitable laws,
To bear you from your palace yard by might,
And put your noble person in a fright :

This, since you take it ill, I must repent ;
Though heaven can witness, with no bad intent ;
I practised it, to make you taste your cheer
With double pleasure, first prepared by fear.
So loyal subjects often seize their prince,
Forced (for his good) to seeming violence,
Yet mean his sacred person not the least offence.
Descend ; so help me Jove ! as you shall find
That Reynard comes of no dissembling kind.'

'Nay,' quoth the cock, 'but I beshrow us both,
If I believe a saint upon his oath :
An honest man may take a knave's advice,
But idiots only may be cozen'd twice.
Once warn'd is well bewared : not flattering lies
Shall sooth me more to sing with winking eyes
And open mouth, for fear of catching flies.
Who blindfold walks upon a river's brim,
When he should see, has he deserved to swim ?'
'Better, sir cock, let all contention cease ;
Come down,' said Reynard, 'let us treat of peace.'
'A peace, with all my soul,' said Chanticleer ;
'But, with your favour, I will treat it here :
And, lest the truce with treason should be mix'd,
'Tis my concern to have the tree betwixt.'

THE MORAL.

In this plain fable you th' effect may see
Of negligence and fond credulity :
And learn besides of flatterers to beware,
Then most pernicious when they speak too fair.
The cock and fox the fool and knave imply ;
The truth is moral, though the tale a lie.
Who spoke in parables, I dare not say ;
But sure he knew it was a pleasing way,
Sound sense by plain example to convey.
And in a heathen author we may find,
That pleasure with instruction should be join'd ;
So take the corn, and leave the chaff behind.

THEODORE AND HONORIA.

OF all the cities in Romanian lands,
The chief and most renown'd Ravenna stands :
Adorn'd in ancient times with arms and arts,
And rich inhabitants, with generous hearts.
But Theodore the brave, above the rest
With gifts of fortune and of nature bless'd,
The foremost place for wealth and honour held,
And all in feats of chivalry excell'd.

This noble youth to madness loved a dame
Of high degree, Honoria was her name :
Fair as the fairest, but of haughty mind,
And fiercer than became so soft a kind ;
Proud of her birth (for equal she had none),
The rest she scorn'd ; but hated him alone.
His gifts, his constant courtship nothing gain'd ;
For she, the more he loved, the more disdain'd :
He lived with all the pomp he could devise,
At tilts and tournaments obtain'd the prize,
But found no favour in his lady's eyes :
Relentless as a rock, the lofty maid
Turn'd all to poison that he did or said :

Nor prayers, nor tears, nor offer'd vows could move ;
The work went backward ; and the more he strove
T' advance his suit, the further from her love.

Wearied at length, and wanting remedy,
He doubted oft, and oft resolved to die.
But pride stood ready to prevent the blow ;
For who would die to gratify a foe ?
His generous mind disdain'd so mean a fate ;
That pass'd, his next endeavour was to hate.
But vainer that relief than all the rest,
The less he hoped, with more desire possess'd ;
Love stood the siege, and would not yield his breast.
Change was the next, but change deceived his care ;
He sought a fairer, but found none so fair.
He would have worn her out by slow degrees,
As men by fasting starve th' untamed disease :
But present love required a present ease.
Looking, he feeds alone his famish'd eyes,
Feeds lingering death ; but looking not, he dies.
Yet still he chose the longest way to fate,
Wasting at once his life and his estate.

His friends beheld, and pitied him in vain ;
For what advice can ease a lover's pain !
Absence, the best expedient they could find,
Might save the fortune, if not cure the mind :
'This means they long proposed, but little gain'd ;
Yet after much pursuit, at length obtain'd.

Hard you may think it was to give consent,
But, struggling with his own desires he went :
With large expense, and with a pompous train,
Provided, as to visit France or Spain,
Or for some distant voyage o'er the main.

But love had clipp'd his wings, and cut him short ;
Confined within the purlieus of his court :
Three miles he went, no farther could retreat :
His travels ended at his country seat.
To Chassis' pleasing plains he took his way,
There pitch'd his tents, and there resolved to stay.

The spring was in the prime ; the neighbouring grove

Supplied with birds, the choristers of love ;
Music unbought, that minister'd delight
To morning walks, and lull'd his cares by night.
There he discharged his friends ; but not th' expense
Of frequent treats, and proud magnificence.
He lived as kings retire, though more at large
From public business, yet with equal charge ;
With house and heart still open to receive ;
As well content as love would give him leave :
He would have lived more free ; but many a guest,
Who could forsake the friend, pursued the feast.

It happ'd one morning, as his fancy led,
Before his usual hour he left his bed,
To walk within a lonely lawn, that stood
On every side surrounded by the wood :
Alone he walk'd, to please his pensive mind,
And sought the deepest solitude to find :
'Twas in a grove of spreading pines he stray'd :
The winds within the quivering branches play'd,
And dancing trees a mournful music made.
The place itself was suiting to his care,
Uncouth and savage as the cruel fair.
He wander'd on, unknowing where he went,
Lost in the wood, and all on love intent.

The day already half his race had run.
And summon'd him to due repast at noon ;
But love could feel no hunger but his own.

Whilst listening to the murmuring leaves he stood,

More than a mile immersed within the wood,
At once the wind was laid ; the whispering sound
Was dumb : a rising earthquake rock'd the ground !
With deeper brown the grave was overspread :
A sudden horror seized his giddy head,
And his ears tinkled, and his colour fled.
Nature was in alarm ; some danger nigh
Seem'd threaten'd, though unseen to mortal eye.
Unused to fear, he summon'd all his soul,
And stood collected in himself, and whole ;
Not long ; for soon a whirlwind rose around,
And from afar he heard a screaming sound,
As of a dame distress'd, who cried for aid,
And fill'd with loud laments the secret shade.
A thicket close beside the grove there stood,
With briars and brambles choked, and dwarfish
wood :

From thence the noise, which now approaching near,
With more distinguish'd notes invades his ear.
He raised his head, and saw a beauteous maid,
With hair dishevel'd, issuing through the shade :
Stripp'd of her clothes, and e'en those parts reveal'd
Which modest nature keeps from sight conceal'd.
Her face, her hands, her naked limbs were torn,
With passing through the brakes and prickly thorn :
Two mastiffs gaunt and grim her flight pursued,
And oft their fasten'd fangs in blood inbrued :

Oft they came up, and pinch'd her tender side,
' Mercy, O, mercy, Heaven !' she ran and cried ;
When Heaven was named, they loosed their hold
again ;

Then sprung she forth, they follow'd her amain.

Not far behind, a knight of swarthy face,
High on a coal-black steed pursued the chase ;
With flashing flames his ardent eyes were fill'd,
And in his hands a naked sword he held :
He cheer'd the dogs to follow her who fled,
And vow'd revenge on her devoted head.

As Theodore was born of noble kind,
The brutal action roused his manly mind :
Moved with unworthy usage of the maid,
He, though unarm'd, resolved to give her aid.
A sapling pine he wrench'd from out the ground,
The readiest weapon that his fury found.
Thus furnish'd for offence, he cross'd the way
Betwixt the graceless villain and his prey.

The knight came thundering on, but from afar,
Thus, in imperious tone, forbade the war :
' Cease, Theodore, to proffer vain relief,
Nor stop the vengeance of so just a grief :
But give me leave to seize my destined prey.
And let Eternal Justice take the way !
I but revenge my fate ; disdain'd, betray'd,
And suffering death for this ungrateful maid.'

He said ; at once dismounting from the steed ;
For now the hell-hounds, with superior speed,
Had reach'd the dame ; and fastening on her side,
The ground with issuing streams of purple dyed.

Stood Theodore surprised in deadly fright,
With chattering teeth and bristling hair upright ;
Yet arm'd with inborn worth, ' Whate'er,' said he,
' Thou art, who know'st me better than ' thee ;
Or prove thy rightful cause, or be defied !'
The spectre, fiercely staring, thus replied :—

' Know, Theodore, thy ancestry I claim,
And Guido Cavalcanti was my name :
One common sire our fathers did beget ;
My name and story some remember yet.
Thee, when a boy, within my arms I laid,
When, for my sins, I loved this haughty maid ;
Not less adored in life, nor served by me,
Than proud Honoria now is loved by thee.
What did I not her stubborn heart to gain ?
But all my vows were answer'd with disdain ;
She scorn'd my sorrows, and despised my pain.
Long time I dragg'd my days in fruitless care ;
Then loathing life, and plunged in deep despair,
To finish my unhappy life, I fell
On this sharp sword, and now am damnd in hell.
Short was her joy ; for soon th' insulting maid,
By Heaven's decree, in the cold grave was laid ;
And as in unrepented sin she died, [pride ;
Doom'd to the same bad place, is punish'd for her
Because she deem'd I well deserved to die,
And made a merit of her cruelty.
There, then, we met ; both tried, and both were cast,
And this irrevocable sentence pass'd ;
That she whom I so long pursued in vain
Should suffer from my hands a lingering pain :

Renew'd to life, that she might daily die,
I daily doom'd to follow, she to fly :
No more a lover, but a mortal foe,
I seek her life (for love is none below),
As often as my dogs with better speed
Arrest her flight, is she to death decreed.
Then with this fatal sword, on which I died,
I pierce her open'd back or tender side,
And tear that harden'd heart from out her breast :
Which, with her entrails, makes my hungry hounds
a feast.

Nor lies she long, but as her fates ordain,
Springs up to life, and fresh to second pain,
Is saved to-day, to-morrow to be slain.'
This, versed in death, the infernal knight relates,
And then for proof, fulfill'd their common fates ;
Her heart and bowels through her back he drew,
And fed the hounds that help'd him to pursue.
Stern look'd the fiend, as frustrate of his will,
Not half sufficed, and greedy yet to kill.
And now the soul expiring through the wound,
Had left the body breathless on the ground.
When thus the grisly spectre spoke again :
' Behold the fruit of ill rewarded pain !
As many months as I sustain'd her hate,
So many years is she condemn'd by fate
To daily death ; and every several place,
Conscious of her disdain and my disgrace,
Must witness her just punishment and be
A scene of triumph and revenge to me.
As in this grove I took my last farewell,
As on this very spot of earth I fell,

As Friday saw me die ; so she my prey
Becomes even here, on this revolving day.'

Thus while he spoke, the virgin from the ground
Upstart'd fresh, already closed the wound ;
And unconcern'd for all she felt before,
Precipitates her flight along the shore :
The hell-hounds, as ungorged with flesh and blood,
Pursue their prey, and seek their wonted food :
The fiend remounts his courser ; mends his pace,
And all the vision vanish'd from the place.

Long stood the noble youth oppress'd with awe,
And stupid at the wondrous things he saw,
Surpassing common faith, transgressing nature's law.

He would have been asleep, and wish'd to wake ;
But dreams, he knew, no long impression make,
Though strong at first : if vision, to what end,
But such as must his future state portend ?
His love the damsel, and himself the fiend.
But yet, reflecting that it could not be
From Heaven, which cannot impious acts decree,
Resolved within himself to shun the snare
Which hell for his destruction did prepare ;
And as his better genius should direct,
From an ill cause to draw a good effect.

Inspired from Heaven, he homeward took his
way,
Nor pall'd his new design with long delay :
But of his train a trusty servant sent
To call his friends together at his tent.
They came ; and usual salutations paid,
With words premeditated, thus he said :

' What you have often counsel'd, to remove
My vain pursuit of unregarded love ;
By thrift my sinking fortune to repair,
Though late, yet is at last become my care :
My heart shall be my own ; my vast expense
Reduced to bounds, by timely providence ;
This only I require ; invite for me
Honorina, with her father's family,
Her friends, and mine ; the cause I shall display
On Friday next, for that's th' appointed day.'

Well pleased were all his friends ; the task was
The father, mother, daughter, they invite ; [light ;
Hardly the dame was drawn to this repast ;
But yet resolved, because it was the last.
The day was come, the guests invited came,
And, with the rest, th' inexorable dame ;
A feast prepared with riotous expense,
Much cost, more care, and most magnificence.
The place ordain'd was in that haunted grove
Where the revenging ghost pursued his love :
The tables in a proud pavillion spread,
With flowers below, and tissue over head :
The rest in rank ; Honorina, chief in place,
Was artfully contrived to set her face
To front the thicket, and behold the chase.
The feast was served ; the time so well forecast,
That just when the desert and fruits were placed,
The fiend's alarm began ; the hollow sound
Sung in the leaves, the forest shook around,
Air blacken'd ; roll'd the thunder ; groan'd the
Nor long before the loud laments arise, [ground.
Of one distress'd, and mastiffs' mingled cries :

And first the dame came rushing through the wood,
 And next the famish'd hounds that sought their food,
 And griped her flanks, and oft essay'd their jaws in blood.

Last came the felon on his sable steed, [speed.
 Arm'd with his naked sword, and urged his dogs to
 She ran, and cried; her flight directly bent
 (A guest unbidden) to the fatal tent, [ment.
 'The scene of death, and place ordain'd for punish-
 Loud was the noise, aghast was every guest,
 The women shriek'd, the men forsook the feast;
 The hounds at nearer distance hoarsely bay'd;
 The hunter close pursued the visionary maid: [aid.
 She rent the heaven with loud laments, imploring

'The gallants, to protect the lady's right,
 Their falchions brandish'd at the grisly sprite:
 High on his stirrups he provoked the fight.
 Then on the crowd he cast a furious look,
 And wither'd all their strength before he strook:
 'Back, on your lives! let be,' said he, 'my prey,
 And let my vengeance take the destined way.
 Vain are your arms, and vainer your defence,
 Against th' eternal doom of Providence:
 Mine is th' ungrateful maid by Heaven design'd:
 Mercy she would not give, nor mercy shall she find!
 At this the former tale again he told
 With thundering tone, and dreadful to behold.
 Sunk were their hearts with horror of the crime,
 Nor needed to be warn'd a second time,
 But bore each other back; some knew the face,
 And all had heard the much lamented case
 Of him who fell for love, and this the fatal place.

And now the infernal minister advanced,
Seized the due victim, and with fury lanced
Her back, and piercing through her inmost heart,
Drew backward, as before, th' offending part.
The reeking entrails next he tore away,
And to his meagre mastiffs made a prey :
The pale assistants on each other stared,
With gaping mouths for issuing words prepared ;
The still born sounds upon the palate hung,
And died imperfect on the faltering tongue.
The fright was general ; but the female band
(A helpless train) in more confusion stand ;
With horror shuddering, on a heap they run,
Sick at the sight of hateful justice done ;
For conscience rung the alarm, and made the case their own.

So, spread upon a lake, with upward eye
A plump of fowl behold their foe on high ;
They close their trembling troop, and all attend
On whom the sousing eagle will descend.

But most the proud Honoria fear'd th' event,
And thought to her alone the vision sent.
Her guilt presents to her distracted mind
Heaven's justice, Theodore's revengeful kind,
And the same fate to the same sin assign'd ;
Already sees herself the monster's prey,
And feels her heart and entrails torn away.
'Twas a mute scene of sorrow, mix'd with fear,
Still on the table lay th' unfinish'd cheer ;
The knight and hungry mastiffs stood around,
The mangled dame lay breathless on the ground :

When on a sudden, re-inspired with breath,
Again she rose, again to suffer death ;
Nor stay'd the hell-hounds, nor the hunter stay'd,
But follow'd, as before, the flying maid :
Th' avenger took from earth th' avenging sword,
And, mounting light as air, his sable steed he spurr'd :

The clouds dispell'd, the sky resumed her light,
And nature stood recover'd of her fright.

But fear, the last of ills, remain'd behind ;
And horror heavy sat on every mind.
Nor Theodore encouraged more his feast,
But sternly look'd, as hatching in his breast
Some deep design ; which when Honoria view'd,
The fresh impulse her former fright renew'd ;
She thought herself the trembling dame who fled,
And him the grisly ghost that spurr'd the infernal
steed :

The more dismay'd, for when the guests withdrew,
Their courteous host saluting all the crew, [adieu !
Regardless pass'd her o'er ; nor graced with kind
That sting infix'd within her haughty mind,
The downfall of her empire she divined ;
And her proud heart with secret sorrow pined.
Home as they went, the sad discourse renew'd
Of the relentless dame to death pursued,
And of the sight obscene so lately view'd.
None durst arraign the righteous doom she bore,
Even they who pitied most, yet blamed her more ;
The parallel they needed not to name,
But in the dead they damn'd the living dame.

At every little noise she look'd behind,
For still the knight was present to her mind :
And anxious oft she started on the way,
And thought the horseman-ghost came thundering for his prey.

Return'd, she took her bed with little rest,
But in short slumbers dream'd the funeral feast :
Awaked, she turn'd her side, and slept again ;
The same black vapours mounted in her brain,
And the same dreams return'd with double pain.

Now forced to wake, because afraid to sleep,
Her blood all fever'd, with a furious leap
She sprung from bed, distracted in her mind !
And fear'd, at every step, a twitching sprite behind.
Darkling and desperate, with a staggering pace,
Of death afraid, and conscious of disgrace ;
Fear, pride, remorse, at once her heart assail'd ;
Pride put remorse to flight, but fear prevail'd.
Friday, the fatal day, when next it came,
Her soul forethought the fiend would change his game,

And her pursue, or Theodore be slain,
And two ghosts join their packs to hunt her o'er the plain.

This dreadful image so possess'd her mind
That, desperate any succour else to find,
She ceased all further hope ; and now began
To make reflection on th' unhappy man :
Rich, brave, and young, who past expression loved,
Proof to disdain, and not to be removed ;
Of all the men respected and admired,
Of all the dames, except herself, desired.

Why not of her ? preferr'd above the rest [fess'd ?
By him with knightly deeds, and open love pro-
So had another been, where he his vows address'd.
This quell'd her pride ; yet other doubts remain'd,
That once disdaining, she might be disdain'd.
'The fear was just ; but greater fear prevail'd,
Fear of her life by hellish hounds assail'd ;
He took a luring leave ; but who can tell,
What outward hate might inward love conceal ?
Her sex's arts she knew, and why not, then,
Might deep dissembling have a place in men ?
Here hope began to dawn ; resolved to try,
She fix'd on this her utmost remedy ;
Death was behind, but hard it was to die.
'Twas time enough at last on death to call,
The precipice in sight : a shrub was all
That kindly stood betwixt to break the fatal fall.

One maid she had, beloved above the rest ;
Secure of her, the secret she confess'd :
And now the cheerful light her fears dispell'd,
She with no winding turns the truth conceal'd,
But put the woman off, and stood reveal'd :
With faults confess'd, commission'd her to go,
If pity yet had place, and reconcile her foe.
The welcome message made, was soon received ;
'Twas what he wish'd and hoped, but scarce believed ;

Fate seem'd a fair occasion to present,
He knew the sex, and fear'd she might repent,
Should he delay the moment of consent.
There yet remain'd to gain her friends (a care
The modesty of maidens well might spare ;)

But she with such a zeal the cause embraced
(As women, where they will, are all in haste)
That father, mother, and the kin beside
Were overborne by fury of the tide :
With full consent of all, she changed her state,
Resistless in her love, as in her hate.

By her example warn'd, the rest beware ;
More easy, less imperious were the fair ;
And that one hunting, which the devil design'd
For one fair female, lost him half the kind.

THE FLOWER AND THE LEAF.

OR,

THE LADY IN THE ARBOUR.

A VISION.

Now turning from the wintry signs, the sun,
His course exalted through the Ram had run,
And, whirling up the skies, his chariot drove Through Taurus, and the lightsome realms of love ;
Where Venus from her orb descends in showers,
To glad the ground, and paint the fields with flowers :
When first the tender blades of grass appear,
And buds, that yet the blast of Fenus fear,
Stand at the door of life, and doubt to clothe the year ;

Till gentle heat and soft repeated rains
Make the green blood to dance within their veins :
Then, at their call, embolden'd out they come,
And swell the gems, and burst the narrow room :
Broader and broader yet their blooms display,
Salute the welcome sun, and entertain the day.

Then from their breathing souls the sweets repair
To scent the skies, and purge th' unwholesome air :
Joy spreads the heart, and with a general song
Spring issues out, and leads the jolly months along.

In that sweet season, as in bed I lay,
And sought in sleep to pass the night away,
I turn'd my weary side, but still in vain,
Though full of youthful health, and void of pain :
Cares I had none, to keep me from my rest.
For love had never enter'd in my breast ;
I wanted nothing fortune could supply,
Nor did she slumber till that hour deny.
I wonder'd then, but after found it true,
Much joy had dried away the balmy dew :
Seas would be pools, without the brushing air
To curl the waves ; and sure some little care
Should weary Nature so, to make her want repair.

When Chanticleer the second watch had sung,
Scorning the scorner sleep, from bed I sprung ;
And dressing, by the moon, in loose array,
Pass'd out in open air, preventing day,
And sought a goodly grove, as fancy led my way.
Straight as a line in beauteous order stood,
Of oaks unshorn, a venerable wood ;
Fresh was the grass beneath, and every tree
At distance planted in a due degree,
Their branching arms in air with equal space
Stretch'd to their neighbours with a long embrace :
And the new leaves on every bough were seen,
Some ruddy-colour'd, some of lighter green.
The painted birds, companions of the spring,
Hopping from spray to spray, were heard to sing ;

Both eyes and ears received a like delight,
Enchanting music, and a charming sight.
On Philomel I fix'd my whole desire,
And listen'd for the queen of all the quire ;
Fain would I hear her heavenly voice to sing,
And wanted yet an omen to the Spring.

Attending long in vain, I took the way,
Which through a path but scarcely printed lay ;
In narrow mazes oft it seem'd to meet,
And look'd as lightly press'd by fairy feet.
Wandering I walk'd alone ; for still methought
To some strange end so strange a path was wrought.
At last it led me where an arbour stood,
The sacred receptacle of the wood :
'This place unmark'd, though oft I walk'd the green,
In all my progress I had never seen :
And, seized at once with wonder and delight,
Gazed all around me, new to the transporting sight.
'Twas bench'd with turf, and goodly to be seen,
The thick young grass arose in fresher green :
The mound was newly made, no sight could pass
Betwixt the nice partitions of the grass,
The well united sods so closely lay ;
And all around the shades defended it from day :
For sycamores with eglantine were spread,
A hedge about the sides, a covering overhead.
And so the fragrant brier was wove between,
The sycamore and flowers were mix'd with green,
That nature seem'd to vary the delight,
And satisfied at once the smell and sight.
The master workman of the bower was known
Through fairy hands, and built for Oberon ;

Who twining leaves with such proportion drew,
They rose by measure, and by rule they grew :
No mortal tongue can half the beauty tell,
For none but hands divine could work so well.
Both roof and sides were like a parlour made,
A soft recess, and a cool summer shade ;
The hedge was set so thick, no foreign eye
The persons placed within it could espy :
But all that pass'd without with ease was seen,
As if nor fence nor tree was placed between.
'Twas border'd with a field ; and some was plain
With grass ; and some was sow'd with rising grain ;
That (now the dew with spangles deck'd the ground)
A sweeter spot of earth was never found.
I look'd, and look'd, and still with new delight ;
Such joy my soul, such pleasures fill'd my sight :
And the fresh eglantine exhaled a breath,
Whose odours were of power to raise from death.
Nor sullen discontent, nor anxious care,
Even though brought thither, could inhabit there :
But thence they fled as from their mortal foe,
For this sweet place could only pleasure know.

Thus as I mused, I cast aside my eye
And saw a medlar-tree was planted nigh :
The spreading branches made a goodly show,
And full of opening blooms was every bough.
A goldfinch there I saw with gaudy pride
Of painted plumes, that hopp'd from side to side,
Still pecking as she pass'd ; and still she drew
The sweets from every flower, and suck'd the dew.
Sufficed at length, she warbled in her throat,
And tuned her voice to many a merry note,

But indistinct, and neither sweet nor clear,
Yet such as sooth'd my soul, and pleased my ear.

Her short performance was no sooner tried,
When she I sought, the nightingale, replied.
So sweet, so shrill, so variously she sung,
That the grove echo'd, and the valleys rung :
And I so ravish'd with her heavenly note,
I stood entranced, and had no room for thought;
But all o'erpower'd with ecstasy of bliss,
Was in a pleasing dream of paradise.

At length I waked ; and looking round the bower
Search'd every tree, and pried on every flower,
If any where by chance I might espy
The rural poet of the melody :

For still methought she sung not far away ;
At last I found her on a laurel spray.
Close by my side she sat, and fair in sight,
Full in a line, against her opposite ;
Where stood with eglantine the laurel twined ;
And both their native sweets were well conjoin'd.

On the green bank I sat, and listen'd long
(Sitting was more convenient for the song) ;
Nor till her lay was ended could I move,
But wish'd to dwell for ever in the grove.
Only methought the time too swiftly pass'd,
And every note I fear'd would be the last.
My sight, and smell, and hearing were employ'd,
Add all three senses in full gust enjoy'd.
And what alone did all the rest surpass,
The sweet possession of the fairy place ;
Single, and conscious to myself alone
Of pleasures to the excluded world unknown :

Pleasures which no where else were to be found,
And all Elysium in a spot of ground.

Thus while I sat, intent to see and hear,
And drew perfumes of more than vital air,
All suddenly I heard th' approaching sound
Of vocal music on th' enchanted ground.
A host of saints it seem'd, so full the quire
As if the bless'd above did all conspire
To join their voices, and neglect the lyre.
At length there issued from the grove behind
A fair assembly of the female kind :
A train less fair, as ancient fathers tell,
Sec'ed the sons of Heaven to rebel.
I pass their form and every charming grace ;
Less than an angel would their worth debase ;
But their attire, like liveries of a kind
All rich and rare, is fresh within my mind.
In velvet white as snow the troop was gown'd,
The seams with sparkling emeralds set around ;
Their hoods and sleeves the same ; and purfl'd o'er
With diamonds, pearls, and all the shining store
Of eastern pomp : their long descending train,
With rubies edged and sapphires, swept the plain :
High on their heads, with jewels richly set,
Each lady wore a radiant coronet.
Beneath the circles, all the quire was graced
With chaplets green on their fair foreheads placed.
Of laurel some, of woodbine many more ;
And wreaths of agnus castus others bore :
These last, who with those virgin crowns were
dress'd,
Appear'd in higher honour than the rest.

They danced around, but in the midst was seen
A lady of a more majestic mien ;
By stature and by beauty mark'd their sovereign
queen.

She in the midst began with sober grace ;
Her servants' eyes were fix'd upon her face :
And, as she moved or turn'd, her motions view'd,
Her measures kept, and step by step pursued.
Nought she trod the ground with greater grace,
With more of godhead shining in her face :
And as in beauty she surpass'd the quire,
So nobler than the rest was her attire.
A crown of ruddy gold enclosed her brow,
Plain without pomp, and rich without a show :
A branch of agnus castus in her hand
She bore aloft, her sceptre of command !
Admired, adored by all the circling crowd ;
For wheresoe'er she turn'd her face, they bow'd :
And as she danced, a roundelay she sung,
In honour of the laurel, ever young :
She raised her voice on high, and sung so clear,
The fawns came scudding from the groves to hear :
And all the bending forest lent an ear.
At every close she made, th' attending throng
Replied, and bore the burden of the song ;
So just, so small, yet in so sweet a note,
It seem'd the music melted in the throat.

Thus dancing on, and singing as they danced,
They to the middle of the mead advanced,
Till round my arbour a new ring they made,
And footed it about the secret shade.

O'erjoy'd to see the jolly troop so near,
But somewhat awed, I shook with holy fear ;
Yet not so much, but that I noted well
Who did the most in song or dance excel.

Not long I had observed, when from afar
I heard a sudden symphony of war ;
The neighing coursers, and the soldiers' cry,
And sounding trumps that seem'd to tear the sky :
I saw soon after this, behind the grove
From whence the ladies did in order move,
Come issuing out in arms a warrior train,
That like a deluge pour'd upon the plain :
On barbed steeds they rode in proud array,
Thick as the college of the bees in May,
When swarming o'er the dusky fields they fly,
New to the flowers, and intercept the sky.
So fierce they drove, their coursers were so fleet
That the turf trembled underneath their feet.

To tell their costly furniture were long,
The summer's day would end before the song :
To purchase but the tenth of all their store
Would make the mighty Persian monarch poor.
Yet what I can I will ; before the rest
The trumpets issued in white mantles dress'd :
A numerous troop, and all their heads around
With chaplets green of cerrial oak were crown'd ;
And at each trumpet was a banner bound ;
Which, waving in the wind, display'd at large
Their master's coat of arms and knightly charge.
Broad were the banners, and of snowy hue,
A purer web the silkworm never drew.

The chief about their necks the scutcheons wore,
With orient pearls and jewels powder'd o'er :
Broad were their collars too, and every one
Was set about with many a costly stone.
Next these of kings at arms a goodly train,
In proud array, came prancing o'er the plain :
Their cloaks were cloth of silver mix'd with gold,
And garlands green around their temples roll'd.
Rich crowns were on their royal 'scutcheons placed,
With sapphires, diamonds, and with rubies graced.
And as the trumpets their appearance made,
So these in habits were alike array'd ;
But with a pace more sober, and more slow :
And twenty, rank in rank, they rode arow.
The pursuivants came next, in number more ;
And, like the heralds, each his 'scutcheon bore :
Clad in white velvet all their troop they led,
With each an oaken chaplet on his head.

Nine royal knights in equal rank succeed,
Each warrior mounted on a fiery steed :
In golden armour glorious to behold ;
The rivets of their arms were nail'd with gold.
Their surcoats of white ermine fur were made :
With cloth of gold between, that cast a glittering shade.

The trappings of their steeds were of the same ;
The golden fringe e'en set the ground on flame,
And drew a precious trail : a crown divine
Of laurel did about their temples twine.

Three benchmen were for every knight assign'd,
All in rich livery clad, and of a kind ;

White velvet, but unshorn, for cloaks they wore,
And each within his hand a truncheon bore :
The foremost held a helm of rare device ;
A prince's ransom would not pay the price :
The second bore the buckler of his knight ;
The third, of cornel-wood, a spear upright,
Headed with piercing steel, and polish'd bright,
Like to their lords', their equipage was seen,
And all their foreheads crown'd with garlands
green.

And, after these, came, arm'd with spear and shield,
A host so great as cover'd all the field :
And all their foreheads, like the knights before,
With laurels ever green were shaded o'er,
Or oak, or other leaves of lasting kind,
'Tenacious of the stem, and firm against the wind.
Some in their hands, beside the lance and shield,
The boughs of woodbine or of hawthorn held,
Or branches for their mystic emblems took
Of palm, of laurel, or of cerrial oak.
Thus marching to the trumpet's lofty sound,
Drawn in two lines adverse they wheel'd around,
And in the middle meadow took their ground.
Among themselves the tourney they divide
In equal squadrons, ranged on either side.
Then turn'd their horses' heads, and man to man,
And steed to steed opposed, the justs began.
They lightly set their lances in the rest,
And, at the sign, against each other press'd :
They met : I, sitting at my ease, beheld
The mix'd events and fortunes of the field.

Some broke their spears, some tumbled horse and man,

And round the fields the lighten'd coursers ran ;
An hour and more, like tides, in equal sway
They rush'd, and won by turns and lost the day.
At length the nine (who still together held)
Their fainting foes to shameful flight compell'd,
And with resistless force o'erran the field.
Thus, to their fame, when finish'd was the fight,
The victors from their lofty steeds alight :
Like them dismounted all the warlike train,
And two by two proceeded o'er the plain :
Till to the fair assembly they advanced,
Who, near the secret harbour, sung and danced.

The ladies left their measures at the sight,
To meet the chiefs returning from the fight,
And each, with open arms, embraced her chosen knight.

Amid the plain a spreading laurel stood,
The grace and ornament of all the wood :
That pleasing shade they sought, a soft retreat,
From sudden April showers, a shelter from the heat.
Her leafy arms with such extent were spread,
So near the clouds was her aspiring head,
That hosts of birds that wing the liquid air,
Perch'd in the boughs, had nightly lodging there :
And flocks of sheep beneath the shade from far
Might hear the rattling hail and wintry war ;
From heaven's inclemency here found retreat,
Enjoy'd the cool, and shunn'd the scorching heat :
A hundred knights might there at ease abide ;
And every knight a lady by his side :

The trunk itself such odours did bequeath
That a Moluccan breeze to these was common breath.
The lords and ladies, here approaching, paid
Their homage, with a low obeisance made :
And seem'd to venerate the sacred shade.
These rites perform'd, their pleasures they pursue,
With songs of love, and mix with measures new ;
Around the holy tree their dance they frame,
And every champion leads his chosen dame.

I cast my sight upon the further field,
And a fresh object of delight beheld :
For, from the region of the west, I heard
New music sound, and a new troop appear'd
Of knights and ladies mix'd, a jolly band ;
But all on foot they march'd, and hand in hand.

The ladies dress'd in rich simars were seen
Of Florence satin, flower'd with white and green,
And for a shade betwixt the bloomy gridelin.
The borders of their petticoats below
Were guarded thick with rubies on a row ;
And every damsel wore upon her head
Of flowers a garland, blended white and red.
Attired in mantles all the knights were seen,
That gratified the view with cheerful green :
Their chaplets of their ladies' colours were, [hair,
Composed of white and red, to shade their shining
Before the merry troop the minstrels play'd ;
All in their master's liveries were array'd,
And clad in green ; and on their temples wore
The chaplets white and red their ladies bore.
Their instruments were various in their kind ;
Some for the bow, and some for breathing wind ;

The psaltry, pipe, and hautboy's noisy band,
And the soft lute trembling beneath the touching hand.

A tuft of daisies on a flowery lay
They saw, and thitherward they bent their way :
To this both knights and dames their homage made,
And due obeisance to the daisy paid.
And when the band of flutes began to play,
To which a lady sung a virelay ;
And still at every close she would repeat
The burden of the song, ' The daisy is so sweet.'
' The daisy is so sweet,' when she begun,
The troop of knights and dames continued on.
The concert and the voice so charm'd my ear,
And sooth'd my soul, that it was heaven to hear.

But soon their pleasure pass'd : at noon of day
The sun with sultry beams began to play :
Not Sirius shoots a fiercer flame from high,
When with his poisonous breath he blasts the sky :
Then droop'd the fading flowers (their beauty fled)
And closed their sickly eyes, and hung the head ;
And, rivel'd up with heat, lay dying in their bed.
The ladies gasp'd, and scarcely could respire :
The breath they drew, no longer air, but fire ;
The fainty knights were scorch'd, and knew not
To run for shelter, for no shade was near. [where
And after this the gathering clouds amain
Pour'd down a storm of rattling hail and rain,
And lightning flash'd betwixt : the field and flowers,
Burn'd up before, were buried in the showers.
The ladies and the knights, no shelter nigh,
Bare to the weather and the wintry sky,

Were dropping wet, disconsolate and wan,
And through their thin array received the rain :
While those in white, protected by the tree,
Saw pass the vain assault, and stood from danger free.

But as compassion moved their gentle minds,
When ceased the storm, and silent were the winds,
Displeased at what, not suffering, they had seen,
They went to cheer the faction of the green.
The queen in white array before her band,
Saluting, took her rival by the hand ;
So did the knights and dames, with courtly grace,
And with behaviour sweet their foes embrace.
Then thus the queen with laurel on her brow :
' Fair sister, I have suffer'd in your woe,
Nor shall be wanting aught within my power
For your relief in my refreshing bower.'
That other answer'd with a lowly look,
And soon the gracious invitation took :
For ill at ease, both she and all her train
The scorching sun had borne, and beating rain ;
Like courtesy was used by all in white,
Each dame a dame received, and every knight a knight.

The laurel champions with their swords invade
The neighbouring forests, where the justs were made,
And sere wood from the rotten hedges took,
And seeds of latent fire from flints provoke :
A cheerful blaze arose, and by the fire [attire.
They warm'd their frozen feet, and dried their wet
Refresh'd with heat, the ladies sought around
For virtuous herbs, which gather'd from the ground

They squeezed the juice, and cooling ointment made,
Which on their sunburn'd cheeks, and their chapp'd skins they laid :

Then sought green salads which they bade them eat,
A sovereign remedy for inward heat.

The lady of the leaf ordain'd a feast;
And made the lady of the flower her guest :
When lo ! a bower ascended on the plain,
With sudden seats adorn'd, and large for either train.

This bower was near my pleasant arbour placed,
That I could hear and see whatever pass'd.

The ladies sat, with each a knight between,
Distinguish'd by their colours, white and green :
The vanquish'd party with the victors join'd,
Nor wanted sweet discourse—the banquet of the mind.

Meantime, the minstrels play'd on either side,
Vain in their art, and for the mastery vied :

The sweet contention lasted for an hour,
And reach'd my secret arbour from the bower.

The sun was set ; and Vesper, to supply
His absent beam, had lighted up the sky ;
When Philomel, officious all the day
To sing the service of th' ensuing May,
Fled from her laurel shade, and wing'd her flight
Directly to the queen array'd in white ;
And hopping, sat familiar on her hand,
A new musician, and increased the band.

The goldfinch, who, to shun the scalding heat,
Had changed the medlar for a safer seat,
And hid in bushes 'scaped the bitter shower,
Now perch'd upon the lady of the flower ;

And either songster holding out their throats,
And folding up their wings, renew'd their notes ;
As if all day, preluding to the fight,
They only had rehearsed, to sing by night.
The banquet ended, and the battle done,
They danced by starlight and the friendly moon ;
And when they were to part, the laureate queen
Supplied with steeds the lady of the green ;
Her and her train conducting on the way.
The moon to follow, and avoid the day.

This when I saw, inquisitive to know
The secret moral of the mystic show,
I started from my shade, in hopes to find
Some nymphs to satisfy my longing mind :
And, as my fair adventure fell, I found
A lady all in white with laurel crown'd,
Who closed the rear, and softly paced along,
Repeating to herself the former song.
With due respect my body I inclined,
As to some being of superior kind,
And made my court, according to the day,
Wishing her queen and her a happy May !
' Great thanks, my daughter ! ' with a gracious bow,
She said ; and I, so much desired to know
Of whence she was, yet fearful how to break
My mind, adventured humbly thus to speak :
' Madam, might I presume, and not offend ?
So may the stars and shining moon attend
Your nightly sports, as you vouchsafe to tell
What nymphs they were who mortal forms excel,
And what the knights who fought in listed fields so well.'

To this the dame replied, ' Fair daughter, know
That what you saw was all a fairy show :
And all those airy shapes you now behold [mould :
Were human bodies once, and clothed with earthly
Our souls, not yet prepared for upper light,
Till doomsday wander in the shades of night :
This only holiday of all the year,
We privileged in sunshine may appear ;
With songs and dance we celebrate the day,
And with due honours usher in the May.
At other times we reign by night alone,
And, posting through the skies, pursue the moon :
But when the morn arises, none are found,
For cruel Demogorgon walks the round,
And if he finds a fairy lag in light,
He drives the wretch before, and lashes into night.
' All courteous are by kind ; and ever proud
With friendly offices to help the good.
In every land we have a larger space
Than what is known to you of mortal race :
Where we with green adorn our fairy bowers,
And even this grove, unseen before, is ours.
Know further, every lady clothed in white,
And, crown'd with oak and laurel every knight,
Are servants to the Leaf, by liveries known
Of innocence, and I myself am one !
Saw you not her, so graceful to behold,
In white attire, and crown'd with radiant gold ?
The sovereign lady of our land is she,
Diana call'd, the queen of chastity :
And, for the spotless name of maid she bears,
That agnus castus in her hand appears :

Who bear the bows were knights in Arthur's reign,
Twelve they, and twelve the peers of Charlemagne ;
For bows the strength of brawny arms imply,
Emblems of valour and of victory.
Behold an order yet of newer date,
Doubling their number, equal in their state ;
Our England's ornament, the crown's defence,
In battle, brave protectors of their prince ;
Unchanged by fortune, to their sovereign true,
For which their manly legs are bound with blue.
These, of the garter call'd, of faith unstain'd,
In fighting fields the laurel have obtain'd,
And well repaid those honours which they gain'd.
The laurel wreaths were first by Cæsar worn,
And still they Cæsar's successors adorn :
One leaf of this is immortality,
And more of worth than all the world can buy.'

'One doubt remains,' said I, 'the dames in green,
What were their qualities, and who their queen ?'
'Flora commands,' said she, 'those nymphs and knights,

Who lived in slothful ease, and loose delights :
Who never acts of honour durst pursue,
The men inglorious knights, the ladies all untrue :
Who, nursed in idleness and train'd in courts,
Pass'd all their precious hours in plays and sports,
Till death behind came stalking on unseen,
And wither'd, like the storm, the freshness of their green.

These and their mates enjoy the present hour,
And therefore pay their homage to the Flower.

But knights in knightly deeds should persevere,
And still continue what at first they were ;
Continue and proceed in honour's fair career.
No room for cowardice or dull delay,
From good to better they should urge their way.
For this with golden spurs the chiefs are graced,
With pointed rowels arm'd to mend their haste ;
For this with lasting leaves their brows are bound ;
For laurel is the sign of labour crown'd,
Which bears the bitter blast, nor shaken falls to ground :

From winter winds it suffers no decay,
For ever fresh and fair, and every month is May.
Even when the vital sap retreats below,
Even when the hoary head is hid in snow,
The life is in the leaf ; and still between
The fits of falling snows appears the streaky green.
Not so the flower, which lasts for little space,
A shortlived good, and an uncertain grace :
This way and that the feeble stem is driven,
Weak to sustain the storms and injuries of heaven.
Propp'd by the spring, it lifts aloft its head,
But of a sickly beauty, soon to shed ;
In summer living, and in winter dead.
For things of tender kind, for pleasure made,
Shoot up with swift increase, and sudden are decay'd.'

With humble words, the wisest I could frame,
And proffer'd service, I repaid the dame :
That, of her grace, she gave her maid to know
The secret meaning of this moral show.

And she, to prove what profit I had made
Of mystic truth, in fables first convcy'd,
Demanded, till the next returning May,
Whether the leaf or flower I would obey ?
I chose the leaf ; she smiled with sober cheer,
And wish'd me fair adventure for the year ;
And gave me charms and sigils, for defence
Against ill tongues that scandal innocence :
' But I,' said she, ' my fellows must pursue ;
Already pass'd the plain and out of view.'

We parted thus ; I homeward sped my way,
Bewilder'd in the wood till dawn of day,
And met the merry crew who danced about the May.
Then late refresh'd with sleep, I rose to write
The visionary vigils of the night.—
Blush, as thou mayst, my little book, for shame !
Nor hope with homely verse to purchase fame ;
For such thy Maker chose ; and so design'd
Thy simple style to suit thy lowly kind.

CYMON AND IPHIGENIA.

POETA LOQUITUR.

OLD as I am, for ladies' love unfit,
The power of beauty I remember yet,
Which once inflamed my soul, and still inspires my wit.

If love be folly, the severe divine*
Has felt that folly, though he censures mine ;
Pollutes the pleasures of a chaste embrace,
Acts what I write, and propagates in grace,
With riotous excess, a priestly race.
Suppose him free, and that I forge th' offence,
He show'd the way, perverting first my sense :
In malice witty, and with venom fraught,
He makes me speak the things I never thought.
Compute the grains of his ungovern'd zeal ;
Ill suits his cloth the praise of railing well !
The world will think that what we loosely write,
Though now arraign'd, he read with some delight ;
Because he seems to chew the cud again,
When his broad comment makes the next too plain,

And teaches more in one explaining page
Than all the double meanings of the stage.

What needs he paraphrase on what we mean
We were at worst but wanton, he's obscene,
I nor my fellows nor myself excuse ;
But love's the subject of the comic muse :
Nor can we write without it, nor would you
A tale of only dry instruction view ;
Nor love is always of a vicious kind,
But oft to virtuous acts inflames the mind ;
Awakes the sleepy vigour of the soul,
And, brushing o'er, adds motion to the pool.
Love, studious how to please, improves our parts
With polish'd manners, and adorns with arts.
Love first invented verse, and form'd the rhyme,
The motion measured, harmonised the chime :
To liberal acts enlarged the narrow soul'd,
Softened the fierce, and made the coward bold :
The world, when waste, he peopled with increase,
And warring nations reconciled in peace.
Ormond, the first, and all the fair may find,
In this one legend, to their fame design'd, [mind.
When beauty fires the blood, how love exalts the

In that sweet isle, where Venus keeps her court.
And every Grace, and all the Loves resort ;
Where either sex is form'd of softer earth,
And takes the bent of pleasure from their birth ;
There lived a Cyprian lord, above the rest
Wise, wealthy, with a numerous issue bless'd :

But as no gift of fortune is sincere,
Was only wanting in a worthy heir.
His eldest born, a goodly youth to view,
Excell'd the rest in shape and outward show ;
Fair, tall, his limbs with due proportion join'd,
But of a heavy, dull, degenerate mind.
His soul belied the features of his face ;
Beauty was there, but beauty in disgrace :
A clownish mien, a voice with rustic sound,
And stupid eyes that ever loved the ground.
He look'd like nature's error ; as the mind
And body were not of a piece design'd, [join'd.
But made for two, and by mistake in one were
The ruling rod, the father's forming care,
Were exercised in vain on wit's despair ;
The more inform'd, the less he understood,
And deeper sunk, by floundering in the mud.
Now scorn'd of all, and grown the public shame,
The people from Galesus changed his name,
And Cymon call'd, which signifies a brute ;
So well his name did with his nature suit.

His father, when he found his labour lost,
And care employ'd, that answer'd not the cost,
Chose an ungrateful object to remove,
And loathed to see what nature made him love ;
So to his country farm the fool confined :
Rude work well suited with a rustic mind.
Thus to the wilds the sturdy Cymon went,
A squire among the swains, and pleased with banishment.

His corn and cattle were his only care,
And his supreme delight a country fair.

It happen'd on a summer's holiday,
That to the greenwood-shade he took his way ;
For Cymon shunn'd the church, and used not much to pray.

His quarterstaff, which he could ne'er forsake,
Hung half before and half behind his back :
He trudged along unknowing what he sought,
And whistled as he went, for want of thought.

By chance conducted, or by thirst constrain'd,
The deep recesses of the grove he gain'd ;
Where in a plain, defended by the wood,
Crept through the matted grass a crystal flood,
By which an alabaster fountain stood ;
And on the margin of the fount was laid
(Attended by her slaves) a sleeping maid :
Like Dian and her nymphs, when, tired with sport,
To rest by cool Eurotas they resort.
The dame herself the goddess well express'd,
Not more distinguish'd by her purple vest
Than by the charming features of her face,
And even in slumber a superior grace :
Her comely limbs composed with decent care,
Her body shaded with a slight simar :
Her bosom to the view was only bare ;
Where two beginning paps were scarcely spied,
For yet their places were but signified.
The fanning wind upon her bosom blows ;
To meet the fanning wind the bosom rose ;
The fanning wind and purling streams continue her repose.

The fool of Nature stood with stupid eyes
And gaping mouth, that testified surprise,

Fix'd on her face, nor could remove his sight :
New as he was to love, and novice in delight :
Long mute he stood, and leaning on his staff,
His wonder witness'd with an idiot laugh ;
Then would have spoke, but by his glimmering sense

First found his want of words, and fear'd offence ;
Doubted for what he was he should be known,
By his clown accent and his country tone.

Through the rude chaos, thus the running light
Shot the first ray that pierced the native night :
Then day and darkness in the mass were mix'd,
Till, gather'd in a globe, the beams were fix'd :
Last shone the sun, who, radiant in his sphere,
Illumined heaven and earth, and roll'd around the
So reason in this brutal soul began ; [year.

Love made him first suspect he was a man ;
Love made him doubt his broad barbarian sound ;
By love his want of words and wit he found :
That sense of want prepared the future way
To knowledge, and disclosed the promise of a day

What not his father's care nor tutor's art
Could plant with pains in his unpolish'd heart,
The best instructor, Love, at once inspired ;
As barren grounds to fruitfulness are fired :
Love taught him shame, and shame, with love at strife,

Soon taught the sweet civilities of life.
His gross material soul at once could find
Somewhat in her excelling all her kind :
Exciting a desire till then unknown,
Somewhat unfound, or found in her alone.

This made the first impression in his mind,
Above, but just above, the brutal kind :
For beasts can like, but not distinguish too,
Nor their own liking by reflection know ;
Nor why they like or this, or th' other face,
Or judge of this or that peculiar grace ;
But love in gross, and stupidly admire ;
As flies, allured by light, approach the fire.
Thus our man-beast, advancing by degrees,
First likes the whole, then separates what he sees ;
On several parts a several praise bestows,
The ruby lips, the well proportion'd nose,
The snowy skin, the raven-glossy hair,
The dimpled cheek, the forehead rising fair,
And even in sleep itself a smiling air.
From thence his eyes descending view'd the rest,
Her plump round arms, white hands, and heaving
breast :

Long on the last he dwelt, though every part,
A pointed arrow sped to pierce his heart.

Thus in a trice a judge of beauty grown
(A judge erected from a country clown),
He long'd to see her eyes, in slumber hid,
And wish'd his own to pierce within the lid :
He would have waked her, but restrain'd his thought ;
And Love, new born, the first good manners taught.
An awful fear his ardent wish withstood,
Nor durst disturb the goddess of the wood ;
For such she seem'd by her celestial face,
Excelling all the rest of human race :
And things divine, by common sense he knew.
Must be devoutly seen at distant view.

So, checking his desire, with trembling heart
Gazing he stood, nor would nor could depart ;
Fix'd as a pilgrim wilder'd in his way,
Who dares not stir by night for fear to stray,
But stands with awful eyes to watch the dawn of day.

At length awaking, Iphigene the fair
(So was the beauty call'd who caused his care)
Unclosed her eyes, and double day reveal'd,
While those of all her slaves in sleep are seal'd.

The slaving cudden, propp'd upon his staff,
Stood ready gaping with a grinning laugh,
To welcome her awake, nor durst begin
To speak, but wisely kept the fool within.
Then she :—' What make you, Cymon, here alone ?'
(For Cymon's name was round the country known,
Because descended of a noble race,
And for a soul ill sorted with his face).

But still the sot stood silent with surprise,
With fix'd regard on her new-open'd eyes,
And in his breast received th' envenom'd dart,
A tickling pain that pleased amid the smart.
But conscious of her form, with quick distrust
She saw his sparkling eyes, and fear'd his brutal lust.

This to prevent, she waked her sleepy crew,
And rising hasty took a short adieu !

Then Cymon first his rustic voice essay'd,
With proffer'd service to the parting maid
To see her safe : his hand she long denied,
But took at length, ashamed of such a guide.
So Cymon led her home, and, leaving there,
No more would to his country clowns repair,

But sought his father's house with better mind,
Refusing in the farm to be confined.

The father wonder'd at the son's return,
And knew not whether to rejoice or mourn ;
But doubtfully received, expecting still
To learn the secret causes of his alter'd will.
Nor was he long delay'd : the first request
He made was like his brothers to be dress'd,
And, as his birth required, above the rest.

With ease his suit was granted by his sire,
Distinguishing his heir by rich attire.
His body thus adorn'd, he next design'd
With liberal arts to cultivate his mind :
He sought a tutor of his own accord,
And studied lessons he before abhorr'd.

Thus the man-child advanced, and learn'd so fast
That in short time his equals he surpass'd :
His brutal manners from his breast exiled,
His mien he fashion'd, and his tongue he filed ;
In every exercise of all admired,
He seem'd, nor only seem'd, but was inspired :
Inspired by love, whose business is to please ;
He rode, he fenced, he moved with graceful ease,
More famed for sense, for courtly carriage more
Than for his brutal folly known before.
What then of alter'd Cymon shall we say,
But that the fire, which choked in ashes lay,
A load too heavy for his soul to move,
Was upward blown below, and brush'd away by love ?

Love made an active progress through his mind,
The dusky parts he clear'd, the gross refined,

The drowsy waked ; and, as he went, impress'd
The Maker's image on the human breast.
Thus was the man amended by desire,
And though he loved perhaps with too much fire,
His father all his faults with reason scann'd,
And liked an error of the better hand ;
Excused th' excess of passion in his mind,
By flames too fierce, perhaps too much refined.
So Cymon, since his sire indulged his will,
Impetuous loved, and would be Cymon still ;
Galesus he disown'd, and chose to bear
The name of fool confirm'd, and bishop'd by the fair.

To Cipseus by his friends his suit he moved ;
Cipseus, the father of the fair he loved :
But he was pre-engaged by former ties,
While Cymon was endeavouring to be wise :
And Iphigene, obliged by former vows,
Had given her faith to wed a foreign spouse.
Her sire and she to Rhodian Pasimond,
Though both repenting, were by promise bound,
Nor could retract ; and thus, as fate decreed,
Though better loved, he spoke too late to speed.

The doom was pass'd, the ship already sent
Did all his tardy diligence prevent :
Sigh'd to herself the fair unhappy maid,
While stormy Cymon thus in secret said :
' The time is come for Iphigene to find
The miracle she wrought upon my mind :
Her charms have made me man, her ravish'd love
In rank shall place me with the bless'd above ;

For mine by love, by force she shall be mine,
Or death, if force should fail, shall finish my design!

Resolved he said ; and rigg'd with speedy care
A vessel strong, and well equipp'd for war :
The secret ship with chosen friends he stored ;
And, bent to die or conquer, went aboard.
Ambush'd he lay behind the Cyprian shore,
Waiting the sail that all his wishes bore ;
Nor long expected, for the following tide
Sent out the hostile ship and beauteous bride.

To Rhodes the rival bark directly steer'd,
When Cymon sudden at her back appear'd,
And stopp'd her flight : then, standing on his prow,
In haughty terms he thus defied the foe :—
' Or strike your sails at summons, or prepare
To prove the last extremities of war !'
Thus warn'd, the Rhodians for the fight provide ;
Already were the vessels side by side,
These obstinate to save, and those to seize the bride.
But Cymon soon his crooked grapples cast,
Which with tenacious hold his foes embraced,
And, arm'd with sword and shield, amid the press he pass'd.

Fierce was the fight, but, hastening to his prey,
By force the furious lover freed his way :
Himself alone dispersed the Rhodian crew,
The weak disdain'd, the valiant overthrew ;
Cheap conquest for his following friends remain'd,
He reap'd the field, and they but only glean'd.

His victory confess'd, the foes retreat,
And cast their weapons at the victor's feet

Whom thus he cheer'd: 'O Rhodian youth! I fought
For love alone, nor other booty sought;
Your lives are safe; your vessel I resign,
Yours be your own, restoring what is mine.
In Iphigene I claim my rightful due,
Robb'd by my rival, and detain'd by you:
Your Pasimond a lawless bargain drove,
The parent could not sell the daughter's love;
Or if he could, my love disdains the laws,
And, like a king, by conquest gains his cause:
Where arms take place, all other pleas are vain,
Love taught me force, and force shall love maintain;
You, what by strength you could not keep, release;
And at an easy ransom buy your peace.'

Fear, on the conquer'd side, soon sign'd th' accord:

And Iphigene to Cymon was restored:
While to his arms the blushing bride he took,
To seeming sadness she composed her look,
As if by force subjected to his will;
Though pleased, dissembling, and a woman still.
And (for she wept) he wiped her falling tears,
And pray'd her to dismiss her empty fears;
'For yours I am,' he said, 'and have deserved
Your love much better, whom so long I served,
Than he to whom your formal father tied
Your vows; and sold a slave, not sent a bride.'
Thus, while he spoke, he seized the willing prey;
As Paris bore the Spartan spouse away.
Faintly she scream'd, and even her eyes confess'd
She rather would be thought, than was, distress'd.

Who now exults but Cymon in his mind ;
Vain hopes and empty joys of humankind,
Proud of the present, to the future blind !
Secure of fate while Cymon ploughs the sea,
And steers to Candy with his conquer'd prey.
Scarce the third glass of measured hours was run,
When like a fiery meteor sunk the sun,
The promise of a storm ; the shifting gales
Forsake by fits and fill the flagging sails :
Hoarse murmurs of the main from far were heard,
And night came on, not by degrees prepared,
But all at once ; at once the winds arise,
The thunders roll, the forked lightning flies.
In vain the master issues out commands,
In vain the trembling sailors ply their hands :
The tempest unforeseen prevents their care,
And from the first they labour in despair.
The giddy ship, betwixt the winds and tides
Forced back and forwards, in the circle rides,
Stunn'd with the different blows ; then shoots amain •
Till counterbuff'd she stops, and sleeps again.
Not more aghast the proud archangel fell,
Plunged from the height of Heaven to deepest hell,
Than stood the lover of his loved possess'd,
Now cursed the more, the more he had been bless'd •
More anxious for her danger than his own,
Death he defies, but would be lost alone.

Sad Iphigène to womanish complaints
Adds pious prayers, and wearies all the saints
Even, if she could, her love she would repent ;
But since she cannot, dreads the punishment :

Her forfeit faith, and Pasimond betray'd,
Are ever present, and her crime upbraid.
She blames herself, nor blames her lover less,
Augments her anger as her fears increase ;
From her own back the burden would remove,
And lays the load on his ungovern'd love,
Which interposing durst, in Heaven's despite,
Invade and violate another's right :
The powers incensed, a while deferr'd his pain,
And made him master of his vows in vain :
But soon they punish'd his presumptuous pride ;
That for his daring enterprise she died,
Who rather not resisted than complied.

Then impotent of mind, with alter'd sense,
She hugg'd th' offender, and forgave th' offence ;
Sex to the last : meantime with sails declined
The wandering vessel drove before the wind :
Toss'd and retoss'd, aloft and then below,
Nor port they seek, nor certain course they know,
But every moment wait the coming blow.
Thus blindly driven, by breaking day they view'd
The land before them, and their fears renew'd ;
The land was welcome, but the tempest bore
The threaten'd ship against a rocky shore.
A winding bay was near ; to this they bent,
And just escaped ; their force already spent :
Secure from storms, and panting from the sea,
The land unknown at leisure they survey ;
And saw (but soon their sickly sight withdrew)
The rising towers of Rhodes at distant view ;
And cursed the hostile shore of Pasimond,
Saved from the seas, and shipwreck'd on the ground.

The frightened sailors tried their strength in vain
To turn the stern, and tempt the stormy main ;
But the stiff wind withstood the labouring oar,
And forced them forward on the fatal shore :
The crooked keel now bites the Rhodian strand,
And the ship moor'd constrains the crew to land.
Yet still they might be safe because unknown ;
But, as ill fortune seldom comes alone,
The vessel they dismiss'd was driven before,
Already sheiter'd on their native shore :
Known each, they know ; but each with change of cheer ;

The vanquish'd side exults ; the victor's fear
Not them but theirs, made prisoners ere they fight,
Despairing conquest, and deprived of flight.

The country rings around with loud alarms,
And raw in fields the rude militia swarms ;
Mouths without hands ; maintain'd at vast expense,

In peace a charge, in war a weak defence :
Stout once a month they march, a blustering band,
And ever, but in times of need, at hand.

This was the morn when, issuing on the guard,
Drawn up in rank and file they stood prepared
Of seeming arms to make a short essay,
Then hasten to be drunk, the business of the day.

The cowards would have fled, but that they knew Themselves so many and their foes so few :
But, crowding on, the last the first impel ;
Till overborne with weight the Cyprians fell.
Cymon enslaved, who first the war begun,
And Iphigene once more is lost and won.

Deep in a dungeon was the captive cast,
Deprived of day, and held in fetters fast ;
His life was only spared at their request,
Whom taken he so nobly had released :
But Iphigenia was the ladies' care ;
Each in their turn address'd to treat the fair ;
While Pasimond and his the nuptial feast prepare.

Her secret soul to Cymon was inclined,
But she must suffer what her fates assign'd ;
So passive is the church of womankind !
What worse to Cymon could his fortune deal,
Roll'd to the lowest spoke of all her wheel ?
It rested to dismiss the downward weight,
Or raise him upward to his former height ;
'The latter pleased ; and love (concern'd the most)
Prepared th' amends for what by love he lost.

The sire of Pasimond had left a son,
Though younger, yet for courage early known,
Ormisda call'd ; to whom, by promise tied,
A Rhodian beauty was the destined bride :
Cassandra was her name ; above the rest
Renown'd for birth, with fortune amply bless'd.
Lysimachus, who ruled the Rhodian state,
Was then by choice their annual magistrate :
He loved Cassandra too with equal fire,
But fortune had not favour'd his desire ;
Cross'd by her friends, by her not disapproved,
Nor yet preferr'd, or like Ormisda loved ;
So stood th' affair : some little hope remain'd,
That should his rival chance to lose, he gain'd.
Meantime young Pasimond his marriage press'd,
Ordain'd the nuptial day, prepared the feast ;

And frugally resolved (the charge to shun,
Which would be double should he wed alone,
To join his brother's bridal with his own.

Lysimachus, oppress'd with mortal grief,
Received the news, and studied quick relief.
The fatal day approach'd : if force were used,
The magistrate his public trust abused ;
To justice liable, as law required ;
For when his office ceased, his power expired :
While power remain'd, the means were in his hand
By force to seize, and then forsake the land.
Betwixt extremes he knew not how to move,
A slave to fame, but more a slave to love :
Restraining others, yet himself not free,
Made impotent by power, debased by dignity.
Both sides he weigh'd : but, after much debate,
The man prevail'd above the magistrate.

Love never fails to master what he finds,
But works a different way in different minds,
The fool enlightens and the wise he blinds.
This youth, proposing to possess and 'scape,
Began in murder, to conclude in rape.
Unpraised by me, though Heaven sometimes may bless

An impious act with undeserved success :
The great, it seems, are privileged alone
To punish all injustice but their own.
But here I stop, not daring to proceed ;
Yet blush to flatter an unrighteous deed :
For crimes are but permitted, not decreed.

Resolved on force, his wit the pretor bent,
To find the means that might secure th' event ;

Not long he labour'd, for his lucky thought
In captive Cymon found the friend he sought ;
Th' example pleased ; the cause and crime the same ;

An injured lover, and a ravish'd dame.
How much he durst he knew by what he dared ;
The less he had to lose, the less he cared
To manage loathsome life, when love was the reward.

This ponder'd well, and, fix'd on his intent,
In depth of night he for the prisoner sent ;
In secret sent, the public view to shun,
Then with a sober smile he thus begun :
' The powers above, who bounteously bestow
Their gift and graces on mankind below,
Yet prove our merit first ; nor blindly give
To such as are not worthy to receive :
For valour and for virtue they provide
Their due reward, but first they must be tried.
These fruitful seeds within your mind they sow'd,
'Twas yours t' improve the talent they bestow'd :
They gave you to be born of noble kind,
They gave you love to lighten up your mind,
And purge the grosser parts : they gave you care
To please, and courage to deserve the fair.

' Thus far they tried you, and by proof they found
The grain intrusted in a grateful ground :
But still the great experiment remain'd,
They suffer'd you to lose the prize you gain'd ;
That you might learn the gift was theirs alone :
And when restored to them the blessing own.
Restored it soon will be ; the means prepared,
The difficulty smooth'd, the danger shared :

Be but yourself, the care to me resign,
Then Iphigene is yours, Cassandra mine.
Your rival Pasimond pursues your life,
Impatient to revenge his ravish'd wife,
But yet not his ; to-morrow is behind,
And Love our fortunes in one band has join'd :
Two brothers are our foes ; Ormisda mine,
As much declared as Pasimond is thine :
To-morrow must their common vows be tied ;
With Love to friend, and Fortune for our guide.
Let both resolve to die, or each redeem a bride.

‘ Right I have none, nor hast thou much to plead ;
’Tis force, when done, must justify the deed :
Our task perform’d, we next prepare for flight ;
And let the losers talk in vain of right :
We with the fair will sail before the wind,
If they are grieved, I leave the laws behind.
Speak thy resolves ; if now thy courage droop,
Despair in prison, and abandon hope ;
But if thou darest in arms thy love regain
(For liberty without thy love were vain),
Then second my design to seize the prey :
Or lead to second rape, for well thou know’st the way.’

Said Cymon, overjoy’d, ‘ Do thou propose
The means to fight, and only show the foes ;
For from the first, when love had fired my mind,
Resolved I left the care of life behind.’

To this the bold Lysimachus replied,
‘ Let Heaven be neuter, and the sword decide :
The spousals are prepared, already play
The minstrels, and provoke the tardy day :

By this the brides are waked, their grooms are
dress'd ;

All Rhodes is summon'd to the nuptial feast,

All but myself, the sole unbidden guest.

Unbidden though I am, I will be there,

And, join'd by thee, intend to joy the fair.

‘ Now hear the rest ; when day resigns the light,

And cheerful torches gild the jolly night,

Be ready at my call ; my chosen few

With arms administer'd shall aid thy crew.

Then entering unexpected will we seize

Our destined prey, from men dissolved in ease,

By wine disabled, unprepared for fight ;

And hastening to the seas suborn our flight :

The seas are ours, for I command the fort,

A ship well mann'd expects us in the port :

If they or if their friends the prize contest,

Death shall attend the man who dares resist.’

It pleased ! the prisoner to his hold retired,

His troop with equal emulation fired,

All fix'd to fight, and all their wonted work required.

The sun arose ; the streets were throng'd around,

The palace open'd, and the posts were crown'd :

The double bridegroom at the door attends

Th' expected spouse, and entertains the friends.

They meet, they lead to church ; the priests invoke

The Powers, and feed the flames with fragrant smoke.

This done, they feast ; and at the close of night

By kindled torches vary their delight,

These lead the lively dance, and those the brimming bowls invite.

Now at th' appointed place and hour assign'd,
 With souls resolved, the ravishers were join'd.
 Three bands are form'd : the first is sent before,
 To favour the retreat, and guard the shore :
 The second at the palace-gate is placed,
 And up the lofty stairs ascends the last :
 A peaceful troop they seem with shining vests,
 Put coats of mail, beneath, secure their breasts.
 Dauntless they enter, Cymon at their head,
 And find the feast renew'd, the table spread :
 Sweet voices, mix'd with instrumental sounds,
 Ascend the vaulted roof, the vaulted roof rebounds :
 When, like the harpies, rushing through the hall
 The sudden troop appears, the tables fall,
 Their smoking load is on the pavement thrown ;
 Each ravisher prepares to seize his own :
 The brides, invaded with a rude embrace,
 Shriek out for aid, confusion fills the place :
 Quick to redeem the prey their plighted lords
 Advance, the palace gleams with shining swords.

But late is all defence, and succour vain ;
 The rape is made, the ravishers remain :
 Two sturdy slaves were only sent before,
 To bear the purchased prize in safety to the shore.
 The troop retires, the lovers close the rear,
 With forward faces, not confessing fear :
 Backward they move, but scorn their pace to mend ;
 Then seek the stairs, and with slow haste descend.

Fierce Pasimond, their passage to prevent,
 Thrust full on Cymon's back in his descent ;
 The blade return'd, unbathed, and to the handle
 bent :

Stout Cymon soon remounts, and cleft in two
His rival's head with one descending blow :
And as the next in rank Ormisda stood,
He turn'd the point : the sword, inured to blood,
Bored his unguarded breast, which pour'd a purple flood.

With vow'd revenge, the gathering crowd pursues,
The ravishers turn head, the fight renews ;
The hall is heap'd with corps ; the sprinkled gore
Besmeares the walls, and floats the marble floor.
Dispersed at length, the drunken squadron flies,
The victors to their vessel bear the prize,
And hear, behind, loud groans and lamentable cries.

The crew with merry shouts their anchors weigh,
Then ply their oars, and brush the buxom sea ;
While troops of gather'd Rhodians crowd the quay.
What should the people do, when left alone ?
The governor and government are gone ;
The public wealth to foreign parts convey'd ;
Some troops disbanded, and the rest unpaid.
Rhodes is the sovereign of the sea no more ;
Their ships unrigg'd, and spent their naval store ;
They neither could defend, nor can pursue,
But grinn'd their teeth, and cast a helpless view ;
In vain with darts a distant war they try,
Short and more short the missive weapons fly.
Meanwhile the ravishers their crimes enjoy,
And flying sails and sweeping oars employ ;
The cliffs of Rhodes in little space are lost,
Jove's isle they seek : nor Jove denies his coast.

In safety landed on the Candian shore,
With generous wines their spirits they restore ;

There Cymon with his Rhodian friend resides,
Both court and wed, at once, the willing brides.
A war ensues, the Cretans own their cause,
Stiff to defend their hospitable laws :
Both parties lose by turns, and neither wins,
Till peace propounded by a truce begins.
The kindred of the slain forgive the deed,
But a short exile must for show precede ;
The term expired, from Candia they remove ;
And happy each, at home, enjoys his love.

THE WIFE OF BATH.

HER TALE.

IN days of old, when Arthur fill'd the throne,
Whose acts and fame to foreign lands were blown,
The king of elves and little fairy queen
Gambol'd on heaths, and danced on every green :
And where the jolly troop had led the round,
The grass unbidden rose, and mark'd the ground :
Nor darkling did they dance, the silver light
Of Phœbe served to guide their steps aright,
And, with their tripping pleased, prolong'd the night.
Her beams they follow'd, where at full she play'd,
Nor longer than she shed her horns they staid ;
From thence with airy flight to foreign lands convey'd.

Above the rest our Britain held they dear ;
More solemnly they kept their sabbaths here,
And made more spacious rings, and revel'd half the year.

I speak of ancient times : for now the swain
Returning late may pass the woods in vain,
And never hope to see the nightly train :

In vain the dairy now with mint is dress'd,
The dairy maid expects no fairy guest
To skim the bowls, and after pay the feast.
She sighs and shakes her empty shoes in vain,
No silver penny to reward her pain :
For priests, with prayers and other goodly geer,
Have made the merry goblins disappear ;
And where they play'd their merry pranks before
Have sprinkled holy water on the floor :
And friars, that through the wealthy regions run
Thick as the motes that twinkle in the sun,
Resort to farmers rich, and bless their halls,
And exorcise the beds, and cross the walls.
This makes the fairy quires forsake the place,
When once 'tis hallow'd with the rites of grace :
But in the walks where wicked elves have been,
The learning of the parish now is seen,
The midnight parson posting o'er the green,
With gown tuck'd up to wakes ; for Sunday next,
With humming ale encouraging his text ;
Nor wants the holy leer to country girl betwixt.
From fiends and imps he set the village free,
There haunts not any incubus but he.
The maids and women need no danger fear
To walk by night, and sanctity so near :
For by some haycock, or some shady thorn,
He bids his beads both even song and morn.

It so befell, in this King Arthur's reign,
A lusty knight was pricking o'er the plain ;
A bachelor he was, and of the courtly train.
It happen'd as he rode, a damsel gay
In russet robes to market took her way ;

Soon on the girl he cast an amorous eye,
 So straight she walk'd, and on her pasterns high ;
 If seeing her behind he liked her pace,
 Now turning short, he better liked her face :
 He lights in haste, and, full of youthful fire,
 By force accomplish'd his obscene desire.
 This done, away he rode, not unespied,
 For swarming at his back the country cried ;
 And once in view they never lost the sight,
 But, seized and pinion'd, brought to court the knight.

Then courts of kings were held in high renown,
 Ere made the common brothels of the town ;
 There, virgins honourable vows received,
 But chaste as maids in monasteries lived.
 The king himself, to nuptial ties a slave,
 No bad example to his poets gave :
 And they, not bad, but in a vicious age,
 Had not, to please the prince, debauch'd the stage.

Now what should Arthur do ? he loved the knight,
 But sovereign monarchs are the source of right !
 Moved by the damsel's tears and common cry,
 He doom'd the brutal ravisher—to die.
 But fair Geneura rose in his defence,
 And pray'd so hard for mercy from the prince
 That to his queen the king th' offender gave,
 And left it in her power to kill or save.
 This gracious act the ladies all approve,
 Who thought it much a man should die for love ;
 And with their mistress join'd in close debate
 (Covering their kindness with dissembled hate),
 If not to free him, to prolong his fate.

At last agreed, they call'd him by consent
Before the queen and female parliament.
And the fair speaker, rising from the chair,
Did thus the judgment of the house declare :
' Sir knight, though I have ask'd thy life, yet still Thy destiny depends upon my will ;
Nor hast thou other surety than the grace
Not due to thee from our offended race.
But as our kind is of a softer mould,
And cannot blood without a sigh behold,
I grant thee life ; reserving still the power
To take the forfeit when I see my hour :
Unless thy answer to my next demand
Shall set thee free from our avenging hand.
'The question, whose solution I require,
Is—" what the sex of women most desire ?"
In this dispute thy judges are at strife ;
Beware ; for on thy wit depends thy life.
Yet, lest surprised, unknowing what to say,
Thou damn thyself, we give thee further day ;
A year is thine to wander at thy will ;
And learn from others, if thou want'st the skill.
But, not to hold our proffer turn'd in scorn,
Good sureties will we have for thy return :
That at the time prefix'd thou shalt obey,
And at thy pledges' peril keep thy day.'

Woe was the knight at this severe command :
But well he knew 'twas bootless to withstand :
The terms accepted as the fair ordain,
He put in bail for his return again,
And promised answer at the day assign'd,
The best, with Heaven's assistance he could find.

His leave thus taken, on his way he went
With heavy heart, and full of discontent ;
Misdoubting much, and fearful of th' event.
'Twas hard the truth of such a point to find,
As was not yet agreed among the kind.
Thus on he went ; still anxious more and more,
Ask'd all he met, and knock'd at every door ;
Inquired of men ; but made his chief request
To learn from women what they loved the best.
They answer'd each according to her mind
To please herself, not all the female kind.
One was for wealth, another was for place ;
Crones, old and ugly, wish'd a better face :
The widow's wish was oftentimes to wed ;
The wanton maids were all for sport a bed.
Some said the sex were pleased with handsome lies,
And some gross flattery loved without disguise :
' Truth is (says one), he seldom fails to win
Who flatters well, for that's our darling sin ;
But long attendance, and a duteous mind,
Will work even with the wisest of the kind.'
One thought the sex's prime felicity
Was from the bonds of wedlock to be free :
Their pleasures, hours, and actions all their own,
And uncontrol'd to give account to none.
Some wish a husband-fool ; but such are cursed,
For fools perverse of husbands are the worst :
All women would be counted chaste and wise,
Nor should our spouses see but with our eyes ;
For fools will prate, and though they want the wit
To find close faults, yet open blots will hit :

Though better for their ease to hold their tongue.
For womankind was never in the wrong.
So noise ensues, and quarrels last for life ;
The wife abhors the fool, the fool the wife ;
And some men say that great delight have we,
To be for truth extol'd, and secrecy ;
And constant in one purpose still to dwell ;
And not our husband's counsel to reveal.
But that's a fable, for our sex is frail,
Inventing rather than not tell a tale.
Like leaky sieves no secrets we can hold,
Witness the famous tale that Ovid told.

' Midas the king, as in his book appears,
By Phœbus was endow'd with ass's ears,
Which under his long locks he well conceal'd,
As monarchs' vices must not be reveal'd,
For fear the people have them in the wind,
Who long ago were neither dumb nor blind ;
Nor apt to think from heaven their title springs,
Since Jove and Mars left off begetting kings.
This Midas knew ; and durst communicate
To none but to his wife his ears of state :
One must be trusted, and he thought her fit,
As passing prudent, and a parlous wit.
To this sagacious confessor he went,
And told her what a gift the gods had sent :
But told it under matrimonial seal,
With strict injunction never to reveal.
The secret heard, she plighted him her troth
(And sacred sure is every woman's oath),
The royal malady should rest unknown,
Both for her husband's honour and her own ;

But ne'ertheless she pined with discontent,
The counsel rumbled till it found a vent.
The thing she knew she was obliged to hide;
By interest and by oath the wife was tied;
But if she told it not, the woman died.
Loath to betray a husband and a prince,
But she must burst or blab: and no pretence
Of honour tied her tongue from self-defence.
A marshy ground commodiously was near;
Thither she ran, and held her breath for fear,
Lest if a word she spoke of any thing,
That word might be the secret of the king.
Thus full of counsel to the fen she went,
Griped all the way, and longing for a vent.
Arrived, by pure necessity compell'd,
On her majestic marrow-bones she kneel'd:
Then to the water's brink she laid her head,
And, as a bittern bumps within a reed,
"To thee alone, O lake! (she said), I tell,
And, as thy queen, command thee to conceal:
Beneath his lock the king my husband wears
A goodly royal pair of ass's ears!—
Now I have eased my bosom of the pain,
Till the next longing fit return again."

Thus through a woman was the secret known;
Tell us, and in effect you tell the town.
But to my tale:—The knight in heavy cheer,
Wandering in vain had now consumed the year;
One day was only left to solve the doubt,
Yet knew no more than when he first set out.
But home he must: and, as the award had been,
Yield up his body captive to the queen.

In this despairing state he happ'd to ride,
As fortune led him, by a forest side :
Lonely the vale, and full of horror stood,
Brown with the shade of a religious wood ;
When full before him at the noon of night
(The moon was up and shot a gleamy light),
He saw a quire of ladies in a round,
That, featly footing, seem'd to skim the ground :
Thus dancing hand in hand, so light they were,
He knew not where they trod, on earth or air.
At speed he drove, and came a sudden guest,
In hope where many women were, at least
Some one by chance might answer his request.
But faster than his horse the ladies flew,
And in a trice were vanish'd out of view.
One only hag remain'd : but fouler far
Than grandame apes in Indian forests are :
Against a wither'd oak she lean'd her weight,
Propp'd on her trusty staff, not half upright,
And dropp'd an awkward curtsy to the knight.
Then said, ' What make you, sir, so late abroad
Without a guide, and this no beaten road ?
Or want you aught that here you hope to find,
Or travel for some trouble in your mind ?
The last I guess ; and, if I read aright,
Those of our sex are bound to serve a knight :
Perhaps good counsel may your grief assuage,
Then tell your pain ; for wisdom is in age.' [know
To this the knight ; ' Good mother, would you
The secret cause and spring of all my woe ?
My life must with to-morrow's light expire,
Unless I tell what women most desire :

Now could you help me at this hard essay,
Or for your inborn goodness or for pay ;
Yours is my life, redeem'd by your advice,
Ask what you please, and I will pay the price.'
' Plight me thy faith (quoth she), that what I ask,
Thy danger over and perform'd the task,
That shalt thou give for hire of thy demand,
Here take thy oath, and seal it on my hand :
I warrant thee, on peril of my life, [wife :
Thy words shall please both widow, maid, and
The proudest kerchief of the court shall rest
Well satisfied of what they love the best.'

More words there needed not, to move the knight
To take her offer, and his truth to plight.
With that she spread her mantle on the ground,
And, first enquiring whither he was bound,
Bade him not fear, though long and rough the way,
At court he should arrive ere break of day ;
His horse should find the way without a guide,
She said : with fury they began to ride ;
He on the midst, the beldam at the side.
The horse what devil drove, I cannot tell,
But only this, they sped their journey well :
And all the way the crone inform'd the knight,
How he should answer the demand aright.

To court they came : the news was quickly spread
Of his returning to redeem his head.
The female senate was assembled soon,
With all the mob of women in the town :
The queen sat lord-chief-justice of the hall,
And bade the crier cite the criminal.

The knight appear'd, and silence they proclaim ;
Then first the culprit answer'd to his name :
And after forms of law, was last required
To name the thing that women most desired.
'Th' offender, taught his lesson by the way,
And by his counsel order'd what to say,
Thus bold began : ' My lady liege (said he),
What all your sex desire is Sovereignty !
The wife affects her husband to command ;
All must be hers, both money, house, and land.
The maids are mistresses even in their name ;
And of their servants full dominion claim.
This, at the peril of my head, I say,
A blunt plain truth—the sex aspires to sway ;
You, to rule all ; while we, like slaves, obey.'

There was not one, or widow, maid, or wife,
But said the knight had well deserved his life.
Even fair Geneura, with a blush, confess'd
The man had found what women love the best.

Upstarts the beldam, who was there unseen,
And, reverence made, accosted thus the queen :
' My liege (said she), before the court arise,
May I, poor wretch, find favour in your eyes,
To grant my just request : 'twas I who taught
The knight this answer, and inspired his thought
None but a woman could a man direct
To tell us women what we most affect.
But first I swore him on his knightly troth
(And here demand performance of his oath).
To grant the boon that next I should desire ;
He gave his faith, and I expect my hire :

My promise is fulfill'd : I saved his life,
And claim his debt—to take me for his wife.'
'The knight was ask'd, nor could his oath deny,
But hoped they would not force him to comply.
The women, who would rather wrest the laws
Than let a sister-plaintiff lose the cause
(As judges on the bench more gracious are,
And more attent to brothers of the bar),
Cried, one and all, the suppliant should have right,
And to the grandame-hag adjudged the knight.

In vain he sigh'd, and oft with tears desired
Some reasonable suit might be required.
But still the crone was constant to her note,
The more he spoke, the more she stretch'd her throat :

In vain he proffer'd all his goods, to save
His body, destined to that living grave.
The liquorish hag rejects the pelf with scorn,
And nothing but the man would serve her turn.
'Nor all the wealth of eastern kings (said she)
Have power to part my plighted love and me :
And, old and ugly as I am, and poor,
Yet never will I break the faith I swore ;
For mine thou art by promise during life,
And I, thy loving and obedient wife.'

'My love ! nay, rather my damnation thou
(Said he) ; nor am I bound to keep my vow :
The fiend, thy sire has sent thee from below,
Else how couldst thou my secret sorrows know ?
Avaunt, old witch ! for I renounce thy bed :
'The queen may take the forfeit of my head,
Ere any of my race so foul a crone shall wed !'

Both heard ; the judge pronounced against the knight ;
So was he married in his own despite
And all day after hid him as an owl,
Not able to sustain a sight so foul.
Perhaps the reader thinks I do him wrong,
To pass the marriage feast and nuptial song :
Mirth there was none, the man was à-la-mort,
And little courage had to make his court.
To bed they went, the bridegroom and the bride ;
Was never such an ill pair'd couple tied.
Restless he toss'd and tumbled to and fro,
And roll'd, and wriggled further off, for woe.
The good old wife lay smiling by his side,
And caught him in her quivering arms, and cried,
' When you my ravish'd predecessor saw,
You were not then become this man of straw ;
Had you been such, you might have 'scaped the law.
Is this the custom of king Arthur's court ?
Are all round table knights of such a sort ?
Remember I am she who saved your life,
Your loving, lawful, and complying wife ;
Not thus you swore in your unhappy hour,
Nor I for this return employ'd my power.
In time of need I was your faithful friend ;
Nor did I since, nor ever will, offend,
Believe me, my loved lord, 'tis much unkind ;
What fury has possess'd your alter'd mind ?
Thus on my wedding night—without pretence—
Come turn this way, or tell me my offence.
If not your wife, let reason's rule persuade,
Name but my fault, amends shall soon be made.'

' Amends ! nay, that's impossible (said he) ;
What change of age or ugliness can be !
Or, could Medea's magic mend thy face,
Thou art descended from so mean a race
That never knight was match'd with such disgrace.
What wonder, madam, if I move my side,
When, if I turn, I turn to such a bride.'

' And is this all that troubles you so sore !'
' And what the devil couldst thou wish me more ?'
' Ah, benedicite ! (replied the crone
Then cause of just complaining have you none.
The remedy to this were soon applied,
Would you be like the bridegroom to the bride ;
But, for you say a long-descended race,
And wealth, and dignity, and power, and place,
Make gentlemen ; and that your high degree
Is much disparaged to be match'd with me ;
Know this, my lord, nobility of blood
Is but a glittering and fallacious good :
The nobleman is he whose noble mind [kind.
Is fill'd with inborn worth, unborrow'd from his
The King of Heaven was in a manger laid ;
And took his earth but from an humble maid :
Then what can birth or mortal men bestow,
Since floods no higher than their fountains flow ?
We, who for name and empty honour strive,
Our true nobility from him derive.
Your ancestors, who puff your mind with pride,
And vast estates to mighty titles tied,
Did not your honour, but their own, advance ;
For virtue comes not by inheritance.

If you traimeate from your father's mind,
What are you else but of a bastard kind ?
Do as your great progenitors have done,
And by their virtues prove yourself their son.
No father can infuse or wit or grace ;
A mother comes across, and mars the race :
A grandsire or a grandame taints the blood,
And seldom three descents continue good.
Were virtue by descent, a noble name
Could never villanize his father's fame :
But, as the first, the last of all the line
Would, like the sun, even in descending, shine.
Take fire, and bear it to the darkest house,
Betwixt King Arthur's court and Caucasus ;
If you depart, the flame shall still remain,
And the bright blaze enlighten all the plain :
Nor, till the fuel perish, can decay,
By nature form'd on things combustible to prey.
Such is not man, who, mixing better seed
With worse, begets a base degenerate breed :
The bad corrupts the good, and leaves behind
No trace of all the great begetter's mind.
The father sinks within his son, we see,
And often rises in the third degree ;
If better luck a better mother give :
Chance gave us being, and by chance we live.
Such as our atoms were, even such are we,
Or call it chance or strong necessity ;
Thus, loaded with dead weight, the will is free.
And thus it needs must be : for seed conjoin'd
Lets into nature's work th' imperfect kind :

But fire, th' enliverer of the general frame,
Is one, its operation still the same.
Its principle is in itself : while ours
Works, as confederates war, with mingled powers ;
Or man, or woman, whichsoever fails ;
And oft the vigour of the worst prevails.
Ether with sulphur blended alters hue,
And casts a dusky gleam of Sodom blue.
Thus in a brute their ancient honour ends,
And the fair mermaid in the fish descends :
The line is gone—no longer duke or earl,
But, by himself degraded, turns a churl.
Nobility of blood is but renown
Of thy great fathers by their virtue known,
And a long trail of light to thee descending down ;
If in thy smoke it ends, their glories shine ;
But infamy and villanage are thine.
Then what I said before is plainly show'd,
The true nobility proceeds from God :
Not left us by inheritance, but given
By bounty of our stars, and grace of heaven.
Thus from a captive Servius Tullus rose,
Whom for his virtues the first Romans chose
Fabricius from their walls repell'd the foe,
Whose noble hands had exercised the plough ;
From hence, my lord and love, I thus conclude,
That though my homely ancestors were rude,
Mean as I am, yet I may have the grace
To make you father of a generous race :
And noble then am I, when I begin,
In virtue clothed, to cast the rags of sin.

If poverty be my upbraided crime,
And you believe in heaven, there was a time
When He, the great controller of our fate,
Deign'd to be man, and lived in low estate :
Which He who had the world at his dispose,
If poverty were vice, had never chose.
Philosophers have said, and poets sing,
That a glad poverty's an honest thing :
Content is wealth, the riches of the mind,
And happy he who can that treasure find :
But the base miser starves amidst his store,
Broods on his gold, and griping still at more,
Sits sadly pining, and believes he's poor.
The ragged beggar, though he wants relief,
Has not to lose, and sings before the thief.
Want is a bitter and a hateful good,
Because its virtues are not understood :
Yet many things, impossible to thought,
Have been by need to full perfection brought :
The daring of the soul proceeds from thence,
Sharpness of wit, and active diligence :
Prudence at once, and fortitude, it gives,
And, if in patience taken, mends our lives :
For even that indigence that brings me low,
Makes me myself, and Him above, to know ;
A good which none would challenge, few would choose,
A fair possession, which mankind refuse.
 ' If we from wealth to poverty descend,
Want gives to know the flatterer from the friend.
If I am old and ugly, well for you,
No lewd adulterer will my love pursue ;

Nor jealousy the bane of married life,
Shall haunt you for a wither'd homely wife :
For age and ugliness, as all agree,
Are the best guards of female chastity.

' Yet since I see your mind is worldly bent,
I'll do my best to further your content :
And therefore of two gifts in my dispose,
Think, ere you speak, I grant you leave to choose ;
Would you I should be still deform'd and old,
Nauseous to touch, and loathsome to behold ;
On this condition, to remain for life,
A careful, tender, and obedient wife,
In all I can contribute to your ease,
And not in deed, or word, or thought, displease ?
Or would you rather have me young and fair,
And take the chance that happens to your share ?
Temptations are in beauty and in youth,
And how can you depend upon my truth ?
Now weigh the danger with the doubtful bliss,
And thank yourself, if aught should fall amiss.'

Sore sigh'd the knight, who this long sermon heard :

At length, considering all, his heart he cheer'd :
And thus replied : ' My lady and my wife,
To your wise conduct I resign my life ;
Choose you for me, for well you understand
The future good and ill on either hand :
But if an humble husband may request,
Provide and order all things for the best ;
Yours be the care to profit and to please,
And let your subject servant take his ease.'

‘ Then thus in peace (quoth she) concludes the strife,

Since I am turn’d the husband, you the wife :
The matrimonial victory is mine,
Which, having fairly gain’d, I will resign.
Forgive, if I have said or done amiss,
And seal the bargain with a friendly kiss :
I promised you but one content to share,
But now I will become both good and fair.
No nuptial quarrel shall disturb your ease,
The business of my life shall be to please :
And, for my beauty, that, as time shall try,
But draw the curtain first, and cast your eye.’

He look’d, and saw a creature heavenly fair
In bloom of youth, and of a charming air :
With joy he turn’d, and seized her ivory arm,
And, like Pygmalion, found the statue warm.
Small arguments there needed to prevail ;
A storm of kisses pour’d as thick as hail.
Thus long in mutual bliss they lay embraced,
And their first love continued to the last :
One sunshine was their life, no cloud between,
Nor ever was a kinder couple seen.

And so may all our lives like theirs be led ;
Heaven send the maids young husbands, fresh in bed ;
May widows wed as often as they can,
And ever for the better change their man
And some devouring plague pursue their lives
Who will not well be govern’d by their wives !

THE

CHARACTER OF A GOOD PARSON.

A PARISH priest was of the pilgrim train ;
An awful, reverend, and religious man.
His eyes diffused a venerable grace,
And charity itself was in his face.
Rich was his soul, though his attire was poor
(As God had clothed his own ambassador);
For such on earth, his bless'd Redeemer bore.
Of sixty years he seem'd ; and well might last
Too sixty more, but that he lived to fast ;
Refined himself to soul, to curb the sense,
And made almost a sin of abstinence.
Yet had his aspect nothing of severe,
But such a face as promised him sincere :
Nothing reserved or sullen was to see,
But sweet regards and pleasing sanctity ;
Mild was his accent, and his action free.
With eloquence innate his tongue was arm'd,
Though harsh the precept, yet the preacher charm'd.

For, letting down the golden chain from high,
He drew his audience upward to the sky :
And oft with holy hymns he charm'd their ears
(A music more melodious than the spheres) :
For David left him, when he went to rest,
His lyre ; and, after him, he sung the best.
He bore his great commission in his look,
But sweetly temper'd awe, and soften'd all he spoke.

He preach'd the joys of heaven, and pains of hell,
And warn'd the sinner with becoming zeal ;
But on eternal mercy loved to dwell.
He taught the gospel rather than the law,
And forced himself to drive, but loved to draw :
For fear but freezes minds ; but love, like heat,
Exhales the soul sublime to seek her native seat.

To threats the stubborn sinner oft is hard :
Wrapp'd in his crimes, against the storm prepared ;
But when the milder beams of mercy play,
He melts, and throws his cumbrous cloak away.
Lightning and thunder (Heaven's artillery)
As harbingers before th' Almighty fly :
Those but proclaim his style, and disappear ;
The stiller sound succeeds, and God is there !

The tithes his parish freely paid, he took,
But never sued, or cursed with bell and book :
With patience bearing wrong, but offering none,
Since every man is free to loose his own.
The country churls, according to their kind
(Who grudge their dues, and love to be behind),
The less he sought his offerings, pinch'd the more ;
And praised a priest contented to be poor.

Yet of his little he had some to spare,
To feed the famish'd, and to clothe the bare :
For mortified he was to that degree,
A poorer than himself he would not see.
'True priests,' he said, 'and preachers of the word,
Were only stewards of their Sovereign Lord ;
Nothing was theirs, but all the public store,
Intrusted riches, to relieve the poor ;
Who, should they steal for want of his relief,
He judged himself accomplice with the thief.'

Wide was his parish, not contracted close
In streets, but here and there a straggling house ;
Yet still he was at hand, without request,
To serve the sick, to succour the distress'd,
Tempting, on foot, alone, without affright,
The dangers of a dark tempestuous night.

Ali this the good old man perform'd alone,
Nor spared his pains : for curate he had none :
Nor durst he trust another with his care ;
Nor rode himself to Paul's, the public fair,
To chaffer for preferment with his gold,
Where bishoprics and sinecures are sold :
But duly watch'd his flock by night and day,
And from the prowling wolf redeem'd the prey,
And hungry sent the wily fox away.

The proud he tamed, the penitent he cheer'd,
Nor to rebuke the rich offender fear'd.
His preaching much, but more his practice wrought
(A living sermon of the truths he taught) :
For this by rules severe his life he squared,
That all might see the doctrine which they heard :

There, as his dream foretold, a cart he found,
That carried compost forth to dung the ground.
This when the pilgrim saw, he stretch'd his throat,
And cried out "Murder!" with a yelling note;
"My murder'd fellow in this cart lies dead,
Vengeance and justice on the villain's head!
You, magistrates, who sacred laws dispense,
On you I call to punish this offence!"

'The word thus given, within a little space,
The mob came roaring out, and throng'd the place.
All in a trice they cast the cart to ground,
And in the dung the murder'd body found,
Though breathless, warm, and reeking from the wound.

Good Heaven, whose darling attribute we find
Is boundless grace and mercy to mankind,
Abhors the cruel; and the deeds of night
By wondrous ways reveals in open light:
Murder may pass unpunish'd for a time,
But tardy justice will o'ertake the crime:
And oft a speedier pain the guilty feels;
The hue and cry of Heaven pursues him at the heels,

Fresh from the fact; as in the present case:
The criminals are seized upon the place:
Carter and Host confronted face to face.
Stiff in denial; as the law appoints,
On engines they distend their tortured joints:
So was confession forced, the offence was known,
And public justice on th' offenders done.

'Here may you see that visions are to dread;
And in the page that follows this, I read

Had Richard unconstrain'd resign'd the throne,
A king can give no more than is his own,
The title stood entail'd, had Richard had a son.

Conquest, an odious name, was laid aside ;
Where all submitted, none the battle tried.
'The senseless plea of right by Providence
Was, by a flattering priest, invented since,
And lasts no longer than the present sway,
But justifies the next who comes in play.

'The people's right remains ; let those who dare
Dispute their power, when they the judges are.

He join'd not in their choice, because he knew
Worse might, and often did, from change ensue ;
Much to himself he thought, but little spoke,
And, undeprived, his benifice forsook. [stretch'd,

Now, through the land, his cure of souls he
And like a primitive apostle preach'd :
Still cheerful, ever constant to his call ;
By many follow'd, loved by most, admired by all.
With what he begged, his brethren he relieved,
And gave the charities himself received :
Gave, while he taught, and edified the more,
Because he show'd by proof, 'twas easy to be poor,
He went not with the crowd to see a shrine ;
But fed us by the way with food divine.

In deference to his virtues, I forbear
To show you what the rest in orders were :
This brilliant is so spotless and so bright,
He needs no foil, but shines by his own proper light.
